POISON LETTER-BOMBS

ROME (Reuters) — A deadly poison used by South American Indians to poison arrows was mixed with explosives contained in a letter-bomb received Wednesday by a Jewish organization in Rome, police said today.

The envelope bore Malaysian stamps and a Penang postmark and contained a Black September visiting card.

It was received by the Rome branch of a world-wide organization for helping persecuted Jews which noticed that the letter had not been marked by the Rome post office—normal procedure for mail arriving from abroad.

Police bomb disposal experts said that the explosive was impregnated with curare, a South American poison which causes quick death by paralysing the motor nerves.

If the bomb had gone off, the poison could have entered the wounds of the victim and made death certain, police said.

New Cong Peace Offer: Communists in Cabinet

Times News Services

PARIS — The Viet Cong said today it is ready to discuss "concrete" guarantees not to seize power in South Vietnam if the United States agrees to the creation of a new cabinet in Saigon with a minority Communist participation.

The offer was made by Mme. Bguyen Thi Binh, the Viet Cong foreign minister and chief negotiator, at today's 162nd Vietnam conference session.

The offer was backed by a warning by both Madame Binh, and Hanoi delegate Xuan Thuy that peace will come only if South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu is removed from power and replaced by a new tripartite coalition cabinet.

The 46-year-old Viet Cong woman politician said the United States was distorting the picture when it claimed the Viet Cong sought to seize control of the new cabinet it wants to form with the Saigon administration minus Thieu and neutral elements.

She said the Viet Cong already had offered to reach an agreement with Washington that South Vietnam would be dominated by "neither a Communist regime nor a U.S. puppet regime."

"We are also prepared to work out, together with other parties, concrete measures to implement this agreement," she said.

Agence France-Presse reports from Hanoi that an atmosphere of "cautious expectation" exists there concerning the chances of a negotiated settlement to the conflict, although the next move is seen as the Americans'.

"The provisional revolutionary government and Hanoi have drawn up proposals which will allow the two parties not to lose face, and now it's the Americans' turn to make their play," according to government sources.

The feeling of being virtually on the edge of a ceasefire, barring any accidents due to the stubbornness or the mis-handling of the situation by one of the parties involved, is shared by many observers here.

Failure to grasp the opportunity now presenting itself would, in all probability, mean that the chance would not be available again for another four years — the length of the presidential mandate in the United States.

In Washington today President Nixon ruled out any halt to the bombing of North Vietnam before the Nov. 7 election, saying former President Lyndon B. Johnson made a "very, very great mistake" when he did so just before the 1968 election.

BENNETT NAMES RICHTER

Opposition leader Bennett has named veteran Social Credit minister Frank Richter as house leader for this month's special session of the legislature.

Bennett made the appointment Wednesday by telegram from Padua, Italy, where he is vacationing.

However, Speaker-designate Gordon Dowding said today Richter's apparent appointment cannot be made formal until the opening day of the session.

Richter himself said he expects no problems about his appointment and added that the other eight remaining Social Credit members have been advised.

5 Spies Executed, Says IRA

BELFAST (CP) — The Provisional wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army said Wednesday night it smashed a British army intelligence undercover ring in Belfast and "executed" five agents, including the daughter of an army brigadier.

The British army called the IRA claim "ridiculous rubbish." But it followed the machine-gun slaying Monday of British undercover agent Tom Stewart, posing as a laundry van driver in Belfast. The Provisionals admitted they were responsible.

The agent and a girl soldier posing as his assistant were one of several undercover intelligence teams operating in Belfast.

The teams from the 50-strong MRF Immediate Reaction Force, which is reputed to have scored several notable successes against the Provisionals in the last few months.

The army was reported to have launched a major security investigation into how the IRA learned the non-existent "Four Square Laundry" operation was an elaborate cover for an intelligence setup. There were fears the IRA had penetrated the undercover organization.

Sources said those fears were heightened Wednesday when the IRA said it had killed Stewart and four other agents, including the group's second in command, whom they identified as an army major known by the code name "Bosman Jim."

"Conservational measures are needed, not only to stretch our resources but to restore, protect, and perpetuate a livable human habitat. We believe that planned adjustment of technology to available domestic resources is essential," it said.

Barrett Urges Cutbacks In Hydro Use

The NDP government wants British Columbians to use less electricity in order to conserve the province's energy resources.

Both Premier Barrett and Resources Minister Bob Williams said today the government is concerned with the amount of energy being consumed in B.C.

Asked by reporters if he has ordered B.C. Hydro to stop advertising promoting use of electricity, Barrett said he had not but that he "expressed the wish that he want to redirect the advertising."

"We don't want people to be wasteful of that wonderful energy resource," Barrett said. "We want people to cut down on the use of electricity."

The premier said his government "just doesn't believe that galloping electricity consumption is something that should be encouraged. We want every citizen in the province to become involved in conserving energy."

In response to a question Barrett said he would favor having the lights turned off in the B.C. Hydro building in downtown Vancouver "if that means conserving energy in peak periods."

He added that he would also favor a curtailment of light use at the Legislative Buildings, except during the tourist season.

Barrett also took a swing at electrical appliance manufacturers who he said are producing appliances that consume far too much electricity.

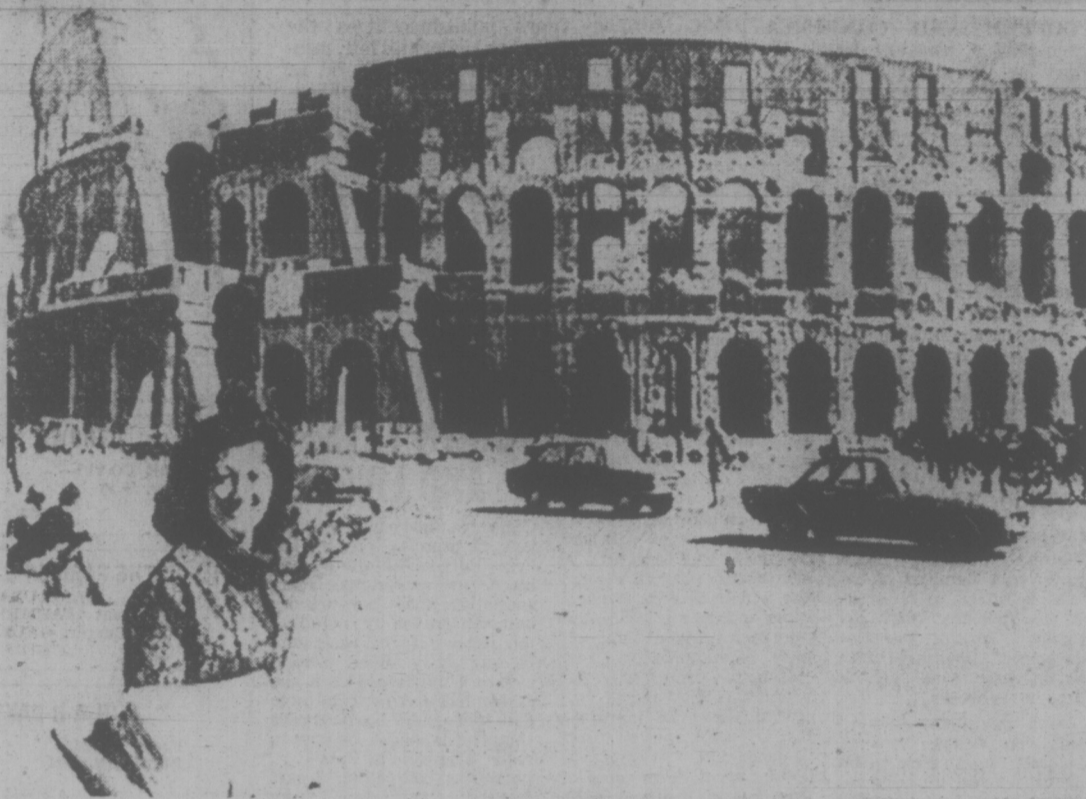

"Let us, small population as we are here in B.C., tell these manufacturers back east and elsewhere that we are going to lead the way in wanting more sensible standards in electricity consumption."

"There is a general concern by the government regarding the incredible demand pattern that exists in B.C. and which is a problem all over North America," Williams said.

"We are convinced that a study on a major scale in terms of working toward curtailing demands for energy is something which we should get under way as soon as possible."

Williams said he will be releasing a policy statement on the issue of energy and the role of B.C. Hydro "within a matter of days."

Asked if there will be recommendations regarding Hydro directorships, Williams said "it will be a comprehensive statement."

Broker Fausta Vitali and 1,892-year-old 'real estate'

They're Vying for the Colosseum

PESCARA, Italy (UPI) — Thomas Merrick has found competition.

Italian hotel owner Antonio Zimei wants to buy the 1,892-year-old Colosseum, too. And he says his terms are better.

"If they take his offer seriously, why shouldn't they consider mine?" Zimei asked after announcing his bid to the press. "After all, I'm offering three times as much."

Zimei, 42, entered the Colosseum race after Merrick, a Los Angeles industrialist, announced he was willing to buy the crumbling Roman arena for $1 million, restore it and reopen it to the public for a fee. Miss Fausta Vitali, a real estate agent from Laguna Beach, Calif., arrived in Rome Wednesday to contact city officials in Merrick's behalf.

Zimei said he could not raise as much cash as Merrick. All he could pay right away, he said, was $100,000, but he was ready to throw his hotel in nearby Montelivano into the deal. And that, he said, is worth $2.58 million and could be used as a school or for poor children's vacations.

"I will charge admission too, but only to foreigners," he said. "Italians can get in free."

METEORS SHOWER DISTRESS SIGNALS

LONDON (Reuters) — Meteors caused confusion in the North Sea during the night when ships' captains mistook them for distress flares.

Coast guards along the east coast of England reported a flood of emergency calls from shipping. Some vessels were even reported to have started searching for ships in trouble.

A coast guard spokesman said today: "For a time there was considerable confusion among shipping. One coast guard station got calls from four ships. But the stations conferred and decided it must have been a meteor shower."

Cargo To Be Seized

PARIS (Reuters) — The giant American Braden Kennecott Copper Co., whose Chilean assets have been nationalized, has won a French court order permitting temporary seizure of a cargo of Chilean copper, informed sources announced Wednesday.

Under the order secured by the Braden Kennecott Corp., the Liberian freighter Birte Oldendorff, carrying 1,250 tons of copper valued at 6.5 million francs ($1.2 million), would have its cargo impounded as soon as it arrives in France.

The copper is destined for the French metal importing agency, which handles 75 per cent of French copper imports, an agency spokesman said. Payment for the copper to the Chilean Copper Corp. — Codelco — is blocked during the court proceedings. The freighter is due at Le Havre on Oct. 14, although it was an open question whether it would put in there now. The American company partly owned the El Teniente copper mine from which the disputed shipment was extracted. El Teniente and the rest of Chile's "big five" mines were nationalized by President Salvador Allende's government 15 months ago.

PM 'Ducks Issue'

Times News Services

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield, in an unusually strong personal attack, accused Prime Minister Trudeau Wednesday of evading responsibility for the policies of his government.

In a frequently-applauded address to an overflow crowd in Edmonton's 2,750-seat Jubilee Auditorium, Stanfield roasted both Trudeau and Manpower Minister Bryce Mackasey for the "scandalous" condition of the unemployment insurance fund.

"The prime minister remains ever anxious to avoid discussing any matter of consequence, ever willing to shift the responsibility to his colleagues, ever reluctant to accept the burden of collective responsibility for the consequences of his own policies or lack of them."

"When a victorious hockey team returns to Canada, our prime minister is there to bask in the reflected glory of a Canadian achievement. Whenever he is asked to defend his policy or to explain his programs, he is out to lunch."

His words heavy with sarcasm, the leader of the opposition also twitted Trudeau over the prime minister's earlier promise of a leisure-activities program.

The prime minister has said that the program, when an-

SUGAR BUNS KILL 2 TOTS

DRUG RAID in Rio de Janeiro netted $60 million worth of pure heroin which agents, acting on a tip, found in five bags aboard a New York-bound freighter. The seizure, largest ever in Brazilian history, weighed 132 pounds.

U.S. Faces Mineral Supply Crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — A scientific group says the United States faces a disastrous mineral-supply crisis "within decades" unless it begins shifting its industrial base to plentiful domestic materials.

The report Wednesday to the national commission on materials policy was another warning that growth — both in population and material production — must come to a halt soon.

The group drawn from the National Research Council concluded "there can be no effective national or international materials policy" without considering population, per-capita demand and environmental impacts.

It said the "demand" side of the supply-demand equation has been largely ignored although "the numbers of humans occupying the earth must be limited to numbers it can comfortably sustain, and their individual consumptions of materials must be kept within supportable limits."

The report said the U.S. already is heavily dependent on foreign raw materials which will be increasingly depleted or withheld as underdeveloped nations industrialize and compete for their use.

Unless the U.S. begins soon to shift its economic base to materials plentiful at home, the report warned, "one can foresee, within decades... the erosion of mining, smelting, refining and mineral-based manufacturing industries, growing economic colonialism, international frictions, a steadily deteriorating balance of trade, and a tarnished global image of the nation."

It said government policy should be to convert the economy gradually into a stable, no-growth condition that can sustain itself indefinitely.

Thus, in milder terms, the U.S. group aligned itself with the general thrust of the Club of Rome report and British scientists' Blueprint for Survival, both published last January.

The Club of Rome, a group of international scientists and economists, predicted the collapse of modern industrial society, perhaps within a century, unless population growth and material consum-

tion are stabilized within the next few decades.

The U.S. national commission on materials policy was appointed in 1971 with the mission of recommending a national materials policy to the president and Congress by June 30, 1973.

The commission gave an interim report in April identifying at least 36 issues in the area of materials-supply problems, but noted the list might be incomplete.

It contracted with the National Research Council for another study of issues.

That study, now published, said: "There was but small support in the group for the view that market forces alone will solve the foreseeable problems."

It said appropriate governmental incentives and controls should be applied to increase production to meet the needs of unavoidable population growth, but at the same time convert the economy in the long run to a no-growth stability.

Attempts to increase U.S. production of minerals, it said, would mean producing "ever-larger quantities of metals obtained from ever-larger deposits" at the cost of "ever-larger investments of energy."

"Conservational measures are needed, not only to stretch our resources but to restore, protect, and perpetuate a livable human habitat."

"We believe that planned adjustment of technology to available domestic resources is essential," it said.

Maritime Museum Cash Condition 'Critical'

The financial condition of the Maritime Museum of B.C. is "critical", says curator Col. J. W. D. Symons.

Symons, who says the museum was scheduled to close Saturday, has sent a wire to Dr. Louis Lemieux, secretary of the consultative committee on national museum policy in Ottawa.

The museum board has been pinning its hopes on receiving a federal yearly grant of $25,000 toward its $100,000 operating budget.

The board has been told that the Secretary of State's department has approved the request and the application has been before the Treasury Board since July.

In his wire, Symons told Lemieux the situation was critical and asked for clarification on the status of the requested grant.

Meanwhile, says Symons, temporary relief might be obtained by borrowing from the bank, using the collection as collateral.

If the federal grant is denied, he says, the board will ask the provincial government for help.

If no support is received from any source Symons says the museum will be forced to close and sell its collection, either piecemeal or "dispersed hither and thither all over the continent."

Refunds Coming In Charter Flap

Charter flight passengers whose Vancouver-London trip was cancelled Monday night will get their fares refunded, the organizing company promises.

Inspectors from the Canadian Transport Commission air transport committee did a spot check on passengers at Vancouver airport and discovered about half the list failed to meet requirements as members of an affinity group, allegedly the Canadian Ski Bob Association.

Dan Air, whose aircraft was to be used, cancelled the flight to protect its operating licence.

Allan Thompson, president of Travel Assistance Bureau which assembled the charter, said a number of the 189 passengers made alternative travel arrangements to fly to London.

He said almost every charter flight from Canada carries passengers who fail to meet membership requirements of an affinity group.

"What happened to us could happen to any charter flight," Thompson said.

The demand for charter services indicates it is time to change the affinity rules, he added.

Thirty of the passengers scheduled to have flown Dan Air Monday were from the Victoria area, booked through charter flight agents here. Tom Woodward, owner of Four Seasons Travel Agency, said charter flight regulations are "ludicrous."

Indian Police Strength Hiked

Native Indian auxiliary police strength will be increased to 15 with seven more to begin training Oct. 16.

The two-week program, introduced in May of last year, is designed to train the recruits to handle policing problems on their home reserves.

Staff Sgt. Bob Miles of Victoria's RCMP training school said two weeks is not really long enough but the project is still in a "hedging state" and two weeks is "enough for them to do their job on the reserves."

He said some of the constables were rejected by the Indians and one was assaulted on his home reserve.

But the project became successful with "drastic action" through arrests and the constables "proving themselves."

"Any job the reserve constables do is going to help relations between the police and Indians," said Miles. He described the constables' action the first year as a "dam good job."

The main offences on the reserves were assaults, family disputes, curfew breaches by younger band members and violation of band bylaws, said Miles.

Equipment and wages are paid for by the band and the RCMP provide the training and oversee reserve policing.

The seven new recruits come from reserves at Cowichan, Bella Bella, Clemtu, Squamish, Burns Lake and Creston.

The existing Indian constables are posted at Bella Bella (Campbell Island), Quadra Island, Kincolith, Fort Simpson, Kitimat and the Nass River area.

STANFIELD

nounced, will leave Canadians "breathless."

"It is characteristic of the Trudeau government that it should announce its most dramatic program not in the field of jobs... but in the field in which there is compulsory abundance," said Stanfield, referring to the larger number of Canadians with leisure time due to unemployment.

Mackasey meanwhile tangled with members of the media in Ottawa as he stood by his statement that expenditures out of the Unemployment Insurance Commission fund were just a "drop in the bucket."

Asked how many "drops" there were in the "bucket," Mackasey shrugged and pointed out that total federal government expenditures were in excess of $15 billion.

Estimated expenditures out of the UIC fund have been reported as $544 million. However Mackasey refused to confirm that figure, nor did he challenge it.

Mackasey was critical of Stanfield for what he described as "attacks" on the UIC program.

He said the Conservatives should get together because Claude Wagner, the Conservative spokesman in Quebec, was "promising even more generous unemployment insurance payments."

Prime Minister Trudeau Wednesday slipped through Social Credit country, promoting bilingualism and federalism as the keys to Canadian brotherhood.

At Lawrence, Trudeau told French-Canadian audiences federalism is the "way of the future."

Bilingualism enriched the country culturally.

The only words of English spoken during the day — by the principal of a joint high school and junior college in La Poutiere — were greeted by boos from about 1,100 students.

Trudeau scolded them for their outburst.

The prime minister's travels took him through three ridings during the day — Kamouraska, Bellechasse and Beauce. All were represented by Social Credit MPs in the last Parliament.

Social Credit held 13 of the province's 74 seats and the Liberals 56.

He said he was glad that former Quebec justice minister Claude Wagner, now Progressive Conservative party leader Stanfield's Quebec lieutenant and a prospective MP, is outlining Conservative policies in the province.

Trudeau said Wagner could explain these policies to Que-becers far better than the federal leader.

He said better explanations would help people to make a more informed and intelligent assessment of the policies of the two parties and so cast their votes more sensibly.

Also campaigning in Quebec, Social Credit leader Caouette, said that Trudeau's promises of "candy" for the voters is no way to conduct an election campaign.

Caouette was criticizing Trudeau's statement at Shawinigan, Que., Tuesday that within 15 days Trudeau would announce a leisure and recreation program "that will leave you breathless."

Caouette termed the Trudeau programs "candy."

"Why didn't he make this gift two years ago, or four?" Caouette said.

"He could have done it then. But no. It always has to wait until just before the election."

He said the "candy" is like the suckers which he said the Liberals gave out to children in 1930 while the adults got drunk on whisky.

CUT DOWN 'FATS'— AND LIVE!

Cigarette smoking, tension, lack of exercise... all are heart killers. But there's one more, just as serious. Heart specialists show how we dig our own graves by including too much fat and cholesterol in our daily diets. Strong evidence indicates this is the reason North Americans have four times more heart disease than the Japanese. Be sure to read "The Role of Fats"... part of a compelling 3-part feature, "YOU AND YOUR HEART" in the October Reader's Digest. It could be the most important reading you do this year!

PEACE PLAN

Nixon told a news conference in his oval office the war could be settled before Nov. 7 — if the right kind of settlement could be made but he said the balloting "will not in any way influence what we do at the negotiating table."

The Johnson administration, he said, though well intentioned, "made a very, very great mistake in stopping the bombing without adequate agreements from the other side." He referred to Johnson's Nov. 1, 1968, announcement of a bombing halt just days before Nixon defeated Hubert H. Humphrey for the presidency.

Madame Binh and other delegation statements made it clear the form of the South Vietnamese regime was the key to an early peace.

The communists demanded Thieu's head although U.S. negotiator William J. Porter and Saigon's deputy representative Nguyen Wuan Phong again condemned the tripartite coalition plan.

Porter called the plan "an arbitrary, illogical formula." He urged an immediate ceasefire throughout Indochina followed within four months by a complete U.S. military pullout, plus direct talks between the Communists and the Thieu government as proposed on May 8 by President Nixon.

$4 MILLION HATCHERY PLAN FOR QUINSAM

A salmon hatchery to be built near Campbell River is expected to cost $4 million and will be the largest in B.C., according to federal fisheries officials.

Tenders for the hatchery at Quinsam River will be called in January and constructed in April, George Neilson of the fisheries service in Vancouver said.

It will breed 1.85 million coho smolts — one-year-old fish — and 3.75 million coho fry for transplant to barren streams allowing nature to rear the fish.

It will also raise three million juvenile chinook (90 days old) and 20,000 steelhead smolts.

Neilson explained that the survival rate of fish raised in hatcheries is often less than 1 per cent, but many thousands of fish would be kept in the hatcheries for breeding purposes.

The aim of the federal fish hatchery program in B.C. is to feed the Gulf of Georgia commercial and sports salmon fishery.

Conciliator For Posties

OTTAWA (CP) — Owen Shinn, a vice-chairman of the Ontario Labor Relations Board, was appointed Tuesday as chairman of a three-member conciliation board established to help resolve a contract dispute between the Council of Postal Unions and the government.

The union nominee of the board is William Walsh, a labor consultant from Hamilton, and the government representative is Bruce Stewart, a Toronto lawyer.

heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

The sentence — most severe ever handed down in British Columbia for a narcotics offence — was imposed by Judge Arthur McClellan in County Court. He told Donzelli he was engaged in a "filthy business."

A spokesman for the National Parole Service said Donzelli would be eligible for parole after serving seven years.

Police found more than nine pounds of heroin — in 146 one-ounce packages — in Donzelli's possession when they entered his home in July of last year.

The wholesale value was estimated at between $233,000 and $354,000, with a street value of more than $1 million.

It was the largest heroin seizure ever made in Vancouver. "It's frightening to think of the bodies and souls that would be prostituted and the lives that would be ruined to raise the more than one million dollars this drug represents," McClellan said.

He said no legislative body or person, no matter how permissive, had ever recommended leniency for traffickers.

Donzelli, who had no record, said the heroin was given to him by a man named "Tom or Sam" who asked him to hold it for a couple of weeks.

Jury Hung, New Trial Ordered for Trueman

A new trial was ordered in B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday night after a jury was unable to reach a verdict on a charge of causing death by criminal negligence.

The hung jury and new trial order followed four hours of deliberation by the panel of 10 men and two women in the case of Wayne Richard Trueman, 25, of Alberta.

Trueman was remanded on his own recognizance to Oct. 16.

Wednesday, Trueman testified that he had sat with friends in his car and drank wine minutes before the crash.

He was testifying in the third day of his trial before Mr. Justice Peter Donald Seaton.

Trueman is charged in connection with the death March 5 of Ronald Morris, 21, of 2720 Foul Bay, at Fort and the Oak Bay junction. Five others, including Trueman, were injured.

The accused said he had driven from his motel with his brother Brian, 19, picked up a friend of Brian's and driven to the ocean front.

There, Trueman said, he had a drink from a half-gallon bottle of wine in his car.

"There was a bad storm that night," he said. "I thought I would go down and see the waves. I like looking at things like that."

"But believe me, I was not impaired. I wouldn't do that."

Trueman said he was "going no faster than 40 — not 60 or 70 — miles per hour" when his car was in collision with a small imported car carrying Morris and a number of other teenagers at about 1 a.m.

Morris died eight hours later after emergency brain surgery at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The accused said he had decided, when he saw that a collision was inevitable, that he would run into the stopped Datsun containing Morris and his friends rather than risk a head-on collision with a vehicle coming in the opposite direction.

"I'm not no speed artist. I didn't want to hit anybody head-on. That's the worst thing you can do," Trueman testified. "I wasn't going at no outrageous speed."

Brian Trueman and passenger Timothy Arthur Soutiere, a friend of the accused's brother, both testified that Trueman was driving at 35 to 40 miles per hour at the time of the crash.

Earlier testimony from other drivers in the area had placed the speed of Trueman's car at from 60 to 80 miles per hour.

A third passenger in the Trueman car, Harvey Mark McLeod, 19, said the traffic light facing the accused was green before the crash.

Testifying on the speed of the accused's car, he said "in my observation the most it was going was 40."

Trueman said he had had two earlier drinks of wine at a friend's home and one beer at a downtown hotel earlier on the night of the accident.

WOMAN SCARED BY KNIFEMAN

Victoria detectives are searching for a young man armed with a hunting knife who frightened the woman proprietor of Alwyn's Antiques, 1019 Fort, on Wednesday.

Police said today the woman had been under sedation and they are withholding her name. She was not injured but badly frightened.

The woman fled to the back of the store when the man entered and pulled the knife. She was alone at the time.

The man fled after the woman ran to the back of the store. Police said the man may have been contemplating robbery, but was frightened when the woman ran away.

The man was described as six feet, four inches tall, in his early 20s, slightly built with long, light brown hair. He was wearing a brown jacket.

King Challenges IWA Men

VANCOUVER (CP) — Collective bargaining may be "clumsy and wasteful," Labor Minister William King told the annual convention of the International Woodworkers of America, but he challenged them to show that it can work.

It has failed in British Columbia during the past few years because the framework of legislation behind it "was unduly compulsive in nature." The previous Social Credit government brought in four years ago the Mediation Commission Act, which provided for compulsory mediation of labor-management disputes with fines for non-compliance.

He wouldn't say whether the controversial act would be revoked — an NDP campaign promise — but said he wanted to talk to labor and management to get their ideas on the subject before planning any major legislative changes.

Both sides would be treated equally, he told reporters after the speech, adding: "I believe in justice and don't believe in stacking the deck in terms of labor law for one side or the other."

Several matters were being considered as legislation and his department would take a "close look at expanding and improving mediation services in the province."

King said he was also concerned with the need for greater trade union organization the government will have

Cleanup Ordered

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Federal Judge Frank Johnson, citing the deaths of several prisoners from "gross neglect," Wednesday ordered the Alabama Prisons System to provide better medical care for inmates.

He said the intentional refusal by correctional officers to allow inmates access to medical personnel and treatment was "cruel and unusual punishment."

Earlier this year, Johnson had ordered the state to make massive improvements at its mental hospitals.

He gave the Board of Corrections 90 days to report on steps it will take to improve care in the prisons.

Johnson said the deaths of several inmates illustrated the "pervasive and gross neglect of prisoners" and were not isolated cases.

The judge said an elderly stroke victim was made to sit day after day on a wooden bench beside his bed so that the bed would not get dirty.

Johnson said another inmate died after bedsores became open, maggot-filled wounds.

He said days would pass without the bandages being changed, and the stench pervaded the entire ward at the prison's medical and diagnostic centre at Mt. Meigs.

Kraft Guilty Over Ads

MONTREAL (CP) — Kraft Foods Ltd. was found guilty Wednesday of a charge of false advertising in its "Explore Canada 70" contest.

Mr. Justice Claude Valierand set Oct. 18 to hear arguments before sentencing.

The sales promotion contest sponsored by the company offered participants "15 big chances to win" a plane trip to any Canadian city, free use of vehicles, $1,000 spending money and a set of luggage.

Chief federal prosecutor Louis-Philippe Landry said no contestant had "15 big chances to win" and 120,900 of the 271,000 entrants had simply wasted a stamp.

Prizes and weekly drawings were done on a regional basis with three prizes going to Quebec and Ontario, two to British Columbia and the Yukon Territories and one to each of the other provinces, he said.

The contest ran from January to April, 1970.

A Problem of Balance

Esquimalt's Mayor Art Young makes a revealing statement in his comment on the prospects of Greater Victoria amalgamation — a merger he sees as a possibility under the new NDP government. It would "be great for everybody but us," he says, explaining that Esquimalt is municipally debt-free and has achieved that position by denying itself some of the facilities enjoyed by other members of the Greater Victoria family. He also believes that were amalgamation to take place, Esquimalt would be required to absorb a share of the other municipalities' debts.

On the face of it, Mayor Young's statement seems to be a protest against the concept that Esquimalt's frugality would be penalized by amalgamation — that having done without certain amenities taxpayers there would have to help pay for advantages to which taxpayers in the other units of the area have committed themselves. His proposed remedy is to borrow now for desirable facilities so that other municipalities, if joined together, could also share in paying part of Esquimalt's costs.

It is by no means certain that amalgamation would result in an unfair apportionment of costs for services and facilities already installed. No great financial wizardry seems essential to work out an equitable arrangement which would honor Esquimalt's debt-free position. Mayor Young's statement that "the fact we have no debt means we lose" is supposition.

The position poses important questions for Esquimalt: Have its residents been denied the facilities which they should have enjoyed, or have they enjoyed such facilities by short trips into the surrounding areas where they can take advantage of amenities paid for by residents of other municipalities? This was the case, for instance, until a few years ago when, before construction of its own rink, Esquimalt had equal access with Victoria to the Memorial Arena for which city taxpayers assumed a major share of the costs. Are comparable situations still in existence?

Mayor Young, very properly, displays a primary concern for the welfare of his own municipality.

As a municipal politician, however, he must realize how jurisdiction and control over some of its affairs, or affairs in which it participates, are slipping away from directly elected municipal councils into the hands of the Regional District Board, whose members are appointed from elected council members rather than elected directly for regional duties.

The trend to regional administration is logical and inevitable, since the growth of the whole district brings more and more public functions into the area of joint responsibility. Sewers, hospitals, planning — these are typical of the common problems which cannot be tackled efficiently by individual, separated municipal governments.

Whether or not the regional form eventually may become the accepted alternative to amalgamation is not yet clear. A multi-tiered civic government could be cumbersome; but a closer, direct responsibility by regional board members to the public would relieve a current trend that could, in time, lead to a loss of the necessary democratic quality.

Prisoners of Each Other

The Communist leaders in Hanoi keep on misjudging American public opinion. They seem to believe that if they release three U.S. prisoners to anti-war and anti-Nixon propagandists, while holding on to the other prisoners, the American people will be impressed by their generosity and turn to George McGovern in the election as a way to end the war and bring all the American prisoners home.

Even from the Communist point of view, this is undoubtedly wrong on several counts. First, the three released prisoners will not all agree to follow the Communist propaganda lines when they come home. Second, releasing a few prisoners to critics of the President and supporters of Senator McGovern is obviously an interference in the American election if not actually a form of blackmail, which hurts both McGovern and Hanoi.

Misjudging Reaction

It is true that the Communist leaders in Hanoi are doing what most governments do with prisoners of war. They are holding on to them and trying to use them to force the President to accept Hanoi's terms of peace. But in the present conditions of the war and American politics and public opinion, both their assumptions and their tactics are embittering the people they are trying to persuade.

To begin with, they seem to be trifling with the sorrow and tragedy of the families of the prisoners left behind. Second, they assume that releasing a few prisoners to anti-war American activists and holding the rest will help their cause, put pressure on the President to settle the war on their terms, and promote McGovern's election in November.

Nothing could be further from the truth. The American prisoners in Hanoi could influence the peace terms and maybe even the American election, but only if Hanoi released them all, not to anti-war activists, but to their families. The Communist leaders cannot use the prisoners to force Nixon to accept their peace terms for fear of losing the election in November. He is too far ahead for that.

They cannot win support from the American voters or help McGovern by releasing their prisoners to the President's critics. But if they turned all the prisoners over to the wives, parents and children of the captive Americans, how would President Nixon explain to the American people that it was necessary to carry on the war and the most savage bombing of the century?

This is the point Henry Kissinger has been trying to make to the Communist leaders in his private talks with Le Duc Kissinger made the same point in his missions to Moscow and Peking, and the Russians and the Chinese, who support Hanoi but need an accommodation with Washington, have worked quietly for compromise. But Hanoi is not listening, even to Moscow or Peking. It is making the same mistake about America that Presidents Kennedy, Johnson, and Nixon made about North Vietnam in the last few years. It thinks the United States will collapse under pressure, just as the last three American Presidents thought North Vietnam would collapse when American men and bombers were sent into the battle, but Washington's assumptions in the past didn't work out that way, and Hanoi's assumptions now are not working out either.

Unfavorable Odds

Hanoi is still thinking that McGovern may win the Presidency in Washington, and Washington is still hoping that Gen. Thieu will somehow retain the Presidency in Saigon, and hold South Vietnam together, but the odds are against it both ways.

Accordingly, sometime and hopefully before the American Presidential election in November, both sides are going to have to compromise in the peace talks at Paris. Hanoi is not going to win by using the prisoners to help McGovern, and Washington is not going to win by insisting that Thieu must retain power in Saigon.

The longer Hanoi holds on to the American prisoners, and the longer Washington insists on supporting Thieu, the longer the war is likely to go on, and this will only increase the tragedy for everybody concerned. They are all prisoners now, not only the three Americans who have come home, and the prisoners left behind, but the governments in Hanoi and Washington, who are still working on assumptions that are out of date.

The New York Times News Service

Thieu in Paris. He has been trying to tell them that their efforts to manipulate the American prisoners won't work, won't defeat Nixon in November, but merely give Nixon a mandate to carry on the war in his second term.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Titles

Having looked through the electorate list for the coming federal elections, I was amazed that I apparently was the only one doing an ordinary job. They are all managers, supervisors, foremen, overseers, bankers. What I would like to know is — who does the jobs like mine? I expect they say: poor devil, how does he manage to survive. — S. H. Radley, 835 Parklands Drive.

H-m-m-m-m

In slavish adherence to the popular trend to publicize the freakish and pornographic, TV, radio and even some newspapers gave lavish publicity to the idiotic, superstitious drive of clairvoyants, astrologers and numerologists predicting the return of the B.C. Secreds to office. Only the Juan de Fuca News-Review published my forecast of the Secred shipwreck.

The radio hotliners, panelists, columnists and sundry "experts" likewise foretold a Secred victory. Instead of taking their cue from this old pro who has had more years of political experience than any one of them, and certainly a more intimate knowledge of the irrational paradox misnamed Social Credit, these naive wisecracks, nourished for years on the Secred-inspired pap of unprincipled pragmatism devoid of ethical significance, merely massaged their petty egos with their obsessional delusions of the alleged Secred invulnerability.

In contrast, my prediction, in the form of a superbly artistic poetic-political epic, prophesied the Secred disaster. In this, after having defined, delineated and dissected the hypocrites and ethical obscenities of the political puppets and fawning politicians in my well-known lucid and trenchant fashion, I concluded with my incomparable prescience: "On such pollibocas a pox, a triple, sticky inky pox—Stop Press! Here comes an SOS: The Secred ship is in distress! It has foundered on the jagged rocks of Maxims coined from Paradox!"

Just imagine how beautifully this inspired prophecy could have been warbled, pizzicato contapunctum, with Bennett's heroic trumpet blare, "The Socialist hordes are at the gate!" — J. J. Zubick, 4982 William Head Rd.

Petition

We have prepared a petition which reads as follows:

"We oppose the injustice of Canadian taxpayers supporting non-citizens through welfare. We petition that individuals not eligible for a Canadian passport, who apply for social assistance, be deported to their country of origin."

As there have been many newspaper articles on this subject across Canada, we feel that the voice of individuals through petition will add strength to this legitimate complaint.

Of the many misuses of welfare we have chosen only one. To include more and add clauses and conditions would result in a haale of misunderstandings, so we decided to take one step at a time. We chose this one because extending social assistance to non-Canadians must surely be the most flagrant of all misuses!

To foot the bill, our present system of taxation on every level from industry through the working ranks is "killing the goose that laid the golden eggs." A sensible solution is to rid ourselves of the freeloaders and the astronomical administration fees spent catering to them.

Our obligation is to the truly unfortunate who are being denied the right to live in dignity above the poverty line because the funds are spread too thinly by embracing the indolent and cadgers, who are distorting the image of welfare.

This simple petition cannot hurt the British living in Canada. With a minimum expenditure of time and money they can become Canadian citizens, putting them in the enviable position of having dual citizenship ... a distinct advantage.

We plan to present our petition to each of the four party leaders in Ottawa. Our approach is of quiet steady pressure, which we plan to continue after the election also. We solicit support. — Mrs. H. Peterson, Box 935, Vernon, B.C.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of October 5, 1912:

Saanich's forty-fifth agricultural show held yesterday and today unfortunately cannot be credited as being such a marked success as the fairs of the two preceding years. The exhibits in every class, except the livestock, are smaller in number than the directors of the society have known for some years. Everything possible was done by the officials to make the show equal its predecessors. Additional classes in the fruits and vegetables were provided and handsome prizes were offered, but to no avail.

The Impediment of Reality

Most of my acquaintances, educators excepted, know what's wrong with the schools and what should be done to cure the faults. It is a matter of democratic individuality only that their assessments and proposed remedies stretch from one pole to the other. Educators are handicapped in their evaluations and proposals. They stub their toes on the hard problems of converting theory into practice. They've had too much experience and they're often too well informed.

But in the last year or two they seem to have been giving a little more constructive thought to such questions as the field the schools should try to cover and what they, as educators, should be doing about it. A teacher of teachers-in-training wonders what he should be teaching the neophytes and if his methods are effective. An administrator suggests that the system may be trying to cater to too large a variety of student tastes, letting courses proliferate to provide more options at continually increasing expense.

Is It School Job?

He cites sex education to illustrate his point — first making it very clear that he has no moral objection to sex education. But, he asks, if families abdicate that field of home instruction, should it necessarily fall on teachers — many of whom feel inadequately equipped for the job — to teach it in classrooms?

The other evening I talked informally with three teachers who have assumed the specialized tasks of working on the profession's affairs. My concern centred on the dollars and cents issue of providing good education in the schools without going broke and losing the works. To support the proposition I quoted one authority whose projection indicates that if costs continue to increase at the rate of recent years, within the next two or three decades higher education alone will absorb all the funds produced in Canada.

After the superficial comment that I'd been listening too much to Donald Brothers — a silly remark because highly competent educators and economists had been saying the same thing long before B.C.'s former minister of education picked it up — my friends advanced reasonable, if not entirely convincing, points. Projections were fallible because they dealt with the unknowns of the future. Who was omniscient enough to forecast the rate of cost increase in the future under circumstances which could not be determined?

My dinner table companions did not seem amenable to the suggestion that teachers might reduce the rate of cost increase by seeking more modest annual raises in pay. They still dispute the $12,000 a year average teachers' salary in Greater Victoria, and they find unacceptable any freeze on increases unless they are applied everywhere — to all earners, profits and prices. They found nothing dishonest in a graph published some weeks ago indicating that the rate of increase in teachers' pay trailed a year behind the rate of increase to industrial workers but did not show the much lower base from which the industrial workers started. They agreed that a 6 per cent increase for a man making a hypothetical $125 a week would provide less, after taxes, than the same percentage for a man making $250, but the widening of the income differential did not appear to disturb them. And while agreeing that 70 per cent of school operating costs were absorbed by teachers' salaries — and that a million dollars spent by a district in annual raises could not be used to improve other learning situations such as hiring more teachers to reduce the size of classes — they objected to being singled out as the profession which should reduce its demands to provide the funds.

Equitable Tax Base

The solution, as they saw it, was to find a more equitable way of raising school revenue — income taxes.

They did, however, present a shrewd rebuttal to the argument that it was democratically reasonable to let taxpayers decide, by referendum, if teachers should be paid above a certain ceiling imposed by government. What, they asked, would voters reply if any governments submitted referendums to determine if any other taxes should be raised, if any deeper reach were to be made into the individual's pocket?

My friends did not assume that the sky is the limit for educational expense, denied that they ever held such a thought. But I came away, as a taxpayer, under the impression that teachers felt the sky was a long, long way off.

Will LCB Change Its Ways?

THE SUN
An Editorial

Perhaps it's a little early to prod the new boys on liquor reform with the bubbles from the kitchen champagne of victory night still sounding in Premier Dave Barrett's ears. But the talent of the Liquor Control Board to maintain the high level of its asinuity despite change of management amounts to a dare, whether intended or not.

If the government can live with an agency that blatantly contradicts so many of its stated policies, even the explanation that liquor reform is "low priority" won't prevent the disenchanted question, what else is new?

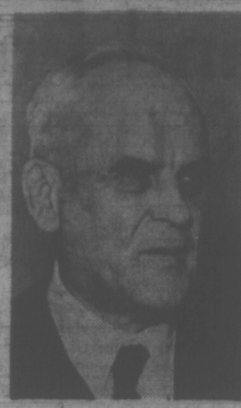

When the board banned earwig-racing, or whatever it was, in a Queen Charlottes pub prior to the election the buck, as always, ended with the then-premier, W. A. C. Bennett, testator and avowed foe of demon rum if not fallen earwigs.

The figureheads laying down the board's bureaucratic nonsense might change but not the man who manipulated them while creaming ever-larger profits from the wicked trade. Whatever the board did — from ensuring the beer parlor monopoly to interfering in labor negotiations to intimidating night clubs — ultimately could be blamed on The Man.

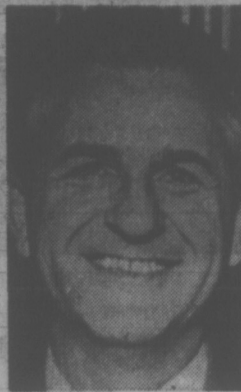

But The Man has gone. When LCB's one-man-band, Bill Bruce, cancels a brewer's "Bavarian evening in celebration of Oktoberfest," apparently because of the same sort of "advertising" violation that ended the Okanagan winery tours, where does the buck stop now? Dave Barrett's admiration of many of W. A. C. Bennett's articles of political apparel is honest and well known. But of all Mr. Bennett's shoes, does Mr. Barrett really want to step into these?

Not, one must gather from Attorney-General Alex Macdonald. Said Mr. Macdonald: the setup of the LCB will be reviewed; the recommendations of the Morrow commission on liquor laws will be studied; the corner pub is a possibility. But, alas, it will take time. "It's a question," said Mr. Macdonald, "of how soon we can get to it without rushing so we stumble."

All most reasonable. Except that Bill Bruce, plainly, is quite prepared to stumble for the lot of them. Mr. Macdonald apparently has indicated that it is not his intention to intervene in this most recent kill-joy edict of the LCB chairman. Intervention may not be necessary. If Mr. Bruce is picked up, dusted off, and firmly pointed in the right direction, the government just might get the breathing time it thinks it needs.

Why Nobody Loves the Corporations

By ALEXANDER ROSS
The Toronto Star

It's a heck of a note when the chairman of Spruce Fall Power and Paper Co. Ltd., a company jointly owned by Kimberley-Clark Ltd. and the New York Times, can't get up in the morning and face his wife across the breakfast table without being told that "there's a corporate rip-off going on in Canada."

Yes, that's what Mrs. M. S. M. Hamilton told her husband the other day. And when Hamilton told his fellow businessmen about it at last week's meeting of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, it fetched a big laugh.

Mostly, though, the business community isn't laughing. We are now in the middle of the heaviest wave of anti-business sentiment since the 1930s, and last week's chamber meeting showed that the men who make our economy run are deeply and painfully aware of it.

In the United States, George McGovern won the Democratic nomination — and still could win the presidency — with a platform that has made him the politician most widely loathed by businessmen since Roosevelt. In Canada the NDP's David Lewis has won amazing mileage out of his charge that corporations are the nation's biggest welfare recipients.

Among the articulate young and less than young, a distaste for business is becoming one of those basic, unchallengeable life-assumptions. To say that "Daddy's in plastics" is virtually to exile a man from the human race. Three years ago, pollster Daniel Yankelovich surveyed U.S. college students, and found to his amazement that, although only 3 per cent could be described as radical, a whopping two out of five students "agree with the radical diagnosis of what is wrong with America."

What's wrong, according to this diagnosis, is that corporate power misdirects a nation's priorities. If what we need is more day care centres, the argument runs, what we get is more hamburger stands. Nearly everything that's distasteful about modern life from the Viet Nam war to high-rise apartments to plastic food to clogged superhighways can be traced, one way or another, to the actions of some corporation or other.

In Canada, the radical analysis goes like this: American corporate power, with the Canadian middle-class as its handmaidens, controls our economy in the interests of outsiders. In the process, our priorities get distorted; instead of developing innovative capabilities of our own, our prosperity has become based on supplying the raw materials to fuel other nations' innovations. Government, instead of opposing this process, actually promotes it, by showing business with tax breaks and handouts.

Well, I guess that makes me a radical. It seems plain to me that the industries we need least — those corporations, mainly foreign-owned, who mine our resources with a minimum of labor input — are the ones who reap the biggest tax advantages. The mining industry's effective rate of taxation is around 12 per cent.

Manufacturing industries, the kind that create the best kind of new jobs, the kind that often depend on ingenuity, pay a far higher rate of effective taxation — more than 40 per cent.

It seems plain that, through a system that evolved more or less by accident, we're extending incentives to the kind of industries that need them least, and at the same time penalizing the kind of industries that Canada needs most.

I find it, well, almost obscene that companies like Denison Mines Ltd. or International Nickel — companies that live by digging rock out of the ground, semi-refining it, then shipping it abroad — pay no taxes at all; while companies like Macmillan Bloedel or Moore Business Forms, firms that have demonstrated their ability to create new products that enable them to compete internationally, pay an effective tax rate of well above 40 per cent.

A country's tax system is a pretty accurate indicator of what that country is trying to become. Canada's tax system is plainly aimed at perpetuating a sort of Rhodesian economy, and I'm not sure that this is what most Canadians want.

Let me put this plainly: I'm pro-business. I've spent a fair part of my life reporting on business, and in the process I've met some of the most talented, creative, self-realized individuals I ever expect to encounter. I believe that, in its purest, most competitive form, the entrepreneurial corporation is a marvellous mechanism for meeting whatever needs a society formulates for itself.

I'm also convinced that Canada, with its infallible instinct for the second-rate, has developed a tax system, and capital markets, and habits of thought, that actually discourage innovation, penalize new business and stifle the kind of business creativity that we need most.

With the right kind of tax system, the right kind of credit policies, the appropriate venture-capital sources and a sympathetic climate, we could develop in this country industries that would be the marvel of the world. Canada could be a supreme in something — you name it — as Japan now is in electronics.

But it won't happen until some federal government decides that it must happen and develops a workable industrial strategy to make it happen.

The Liberals haven't even tried. Trudeau's greatest economic achievement will probably turn out to be the proposed MacKenzie Valley Pipeline — a venture that is largely foreign-owned, aimed at transporting our raw resources to foreign markets, largely for the further enrichment of companies who already receive extravagant tax advantages.

This is C. D. Howe all over. I find it deliciously ironic that David Lewis — leader of a party that is allegedly anti-business — offers the best hope for creating a business climate in which enterprise is encouraged, and enrichment, for once, is no longer rewarded at our expense.

The Case Against the Pornography 'Disease'

By DAVID HOLBROOK

... why the ridicule?

LONDON — Why is Britain's Lord Longford the subject of so much hostility and ridicule? Why, after a serious and thoughtful press conference, did we have a lunatic press treatment — in which the major star was an ex-prostitute? Why is there such an irrational turmoil in England today, over the issue of pornography?

The answer is that pornography is a form of sexual perversion. Sexual perversions are a form of mental illness — and this particular one is "scopophilia," the urge to look, and to be mentally stimulated, in such a way as not to lead towards warm-hearted loving between a man and a woman — but towards feeling hate and contempt for others.

Avoiding Madness

Perversions are, to some extent, according to psychological experts on such problems, ways in which the perverted individual defends himself against psychosis — that is, madness. The pervert who puts out pornography, and peddles it, is trying to avoid mental breakdown, into madness. But today this strange psychological manoeuvre can be very profitable, and the pervert's false "strategies of survival" are put out into society on a mass scale.

People do not like having their mental illnesses exposed. And that is why Lord Longford is having such a bad time.

The word "perversion" does not perhaps come out strongly enough in the Longford Report. But it is there. For instance, Leslie Shepard is quoted from the magazine Energy and Character — journal for the followers of Wilhelm Reich — as saying that "in Britain, neurotic sexual preoccupations have almost reached the point of a national perversion."

It is not that British culture occasionally deals with perversions. It is that the audiences are involved in perverted activities — such as watching scenes of the grossest obscenity. As a young writer, Nicholas Garnham, said recently in the left-wing magazine Seven Days, "in Ken Russell's films the audiences are encouraged to indulge their taste for perverse sex and violence, but this indulgence is made respectable because it is touted as history and art, unlike the Hammer horror movies which Russell's films in many ways resemble... deep sexual disgust runs through all Russell's movies. This disgust is concentrated on female sexuality..."

Things could be worse. I have just been reading the American version of Oh! Calcutta! In one scene Jack and Jill, a man and a woman dressed like the nursery rhyme characters, measure one another's genitals and then have sexual intercourse. The girl shouts "You're killing me" — and then dies. The man fondles the "body" and puts it up like a doll, makes the face into a smile, and opens the body's eyes. This is to act out on the stage the insane fantasies of the neophilic — and to involve the audience in gloating on a sick fantasy of destroying woman, by sex. Nothing could be more sick.

Vicious Scenes

There are scenes in the British version of Oh! Calcutta! which are as bad — and now tens of thousands of Britishers must have been corrupted by such vicious scenes as a woman made, like a performing animal, to expose her bare posterior to a laughing audience.

In the Longford Report there are many quotations from expert psychoanalysts which make plain the elements of hostility in pornography — hostility to woman, and to sex itself. True sexual revolutionaries believe that all this sick sex represents a new and sinister inhibition of people's feelings.

The Longford Report discusses some Nazi pornographic propaganda alongside pornography from the "underground" press, and from the way-out revolutionary movement. This comparison shows well enough that "the politics of pornography" are inherently fascist" as Masud Khan, the psychoanalyst and expert on sexual perversion, has said.

Collective Disease

Also shown here is the way in which this disease can become collective. As a follower of Carl Jung has argued, the hostility in pornography is directed against the unconscious "shadow" which Jung calls the image of woman in the man's mind. Over this shadow, "when the others do dark primitive things," he says, "a man begins to feel a fool if he doesn't join in. Thus he gives way to impulses that do not really belong to him at all."

There is a terrible, and very moving chapter, in the Longford Report in which evidence is given of how some older boys corrupted little boys of 11 in a school — using a pornography scrap-book as an instrument. There are also cases which began with pornography and perversion — and ended in arson and violence.

There is also evidence that "young actresses, engaged to play nuns in Russell's film, The Devils, were 'humiliated, badly man-handled, and terrified during filming.'" This was stated by their agent: the actresses dare not give their names, for fear of unemployment. The most important proposal in the Longford Report is one which would prevent the exploitation of performers, for pornographic purposes.

In a recent publication, The Obscenity Report, Maurice Girodias declares that "no one, child or adult, would be harmed by more freedom." The Longford Report shows this to be false.

So, Lord Longford has broken the spell. At last there is a debate. When I returned from Australia in 1970, I was appalled. So, too, was Bishop Trevor Huddleston. In the Longford Report he writes "I love England... but the moment I came back I felt things had gone desperately wrong. I think the country was very sick indeed."

The pornographers offer us a new integration of body and feeling. But, as Masud Khan points out, what they really do is to "negate" the self and the other person — and to drive sex away from the personal, and thus away from joy, love, and meaning. The Longford Report, in tackling this perversion of culture, thus comes out as a positive document, which seeks to defend true sexuality against the intrusions of those who are impelled by a hatred of man and sex.

Especially in the chapter on sex education it is concerned to defend children from too-explicit, and pornographic, books and films — while urging more creative explorations of whole human problems. Throughout the report there is a rejection of the idea of man as a mere "pleasure machine" — an attitude which pornography promotes, and which is seen by many as leading towards a new, irresponsible barbarism, in which there could be a serious lowering of concern, and care; and so, more violence, rape, and sexual offences.

In an already violent society, it would seem foolish, in the light of this report, to go on pouring out hate and dehumanisation, into a bewildered society which has lost many of its values and it is no service to sexuality and its democratisation, to pour out increasingly perverted material — in the name of "freedom."

Lord Longford has raised these issues in a form in which they must be hotly debated, at last, in a truly democratic way.

Dirt on Its Hands

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

A writer for The Times of London makes the point that although the United States is leading the international campaign to combat terrorism, it is also one of the major producers of the type of lethal device that killed the Israeli diplomat in London and that was mailed to Israeli officials in Montreal and Ottawa.

One particularly offensive U.S.-made explosive device is called Gravel. It is said to look like an innocent piece of cotton wadding and would be unlikely to arouse much suspicion if placed in an envelope. Yet it is powerful enough to blow the foot off a Viet Cong soldier.

Surely the United States could wage its fight against terrorism with cleaner hands if it were itself immediately to halt production and use of the kind of terror-weapon which it rightly deplores when mailed to Israelis.

Editorial From Lilac

The Globe and Mail

(The following editorial is reprinted in its entirety from Tuesday's late, and only, edition of The Lilac Advance. The Advance, Lilac's leading, and only, newspaper, has not endorsed any candidate or party in the coming federal election—and, in fact, has expressed editorial doubts that it really is coming.)

It is indicative of the giddy pace of the Liberal Party's campaign in this election that, when the Prime Minister rounded on a heckler in Vancouver the other day and used a naughty word at him, a Liberal organizer was overheard to say: "That's the one thing I've been afraid of in this campaign — that he'd pique too soon."

So far the Prime Minister has been so remote from the world around that even Margaret couldn't get through to him until she had herself delivered by room service disguised as a ham sandwich. Needless to say we would hesitate to meddle in anyone's private life, but our editorial advice to the lady would be that, the next time she wants to talk to her husband, she try to get on Jack Webster's show.

What with the reliance on the telephone and radio, this campaign looks like a throw-back to the era of Colonel Stupnagel and Bud, Ben Bernie and all the Lads, and Myrt and Marge. The Liberal campaign song ought to be, He-lo Central, Give me a Line. Is that any way for what purports to be a modern political party to behave? If they go on like this, the first thing they know they'll bring back print.

In the circumstances, it is with gratification that The Advance learns of a story carried by the Ottawa Journal today under the heading "Trudeau To Shift Into High Gear." Mechanically, it seems a questionable thing to do, especially directly from reverse, but the state of the Prime Minister's transmission is not for us to worry about. We welcome the news that the Liberal campaign is about to move into Phase Two because it is always a pleasure to meet a familiar phase — and certainly no one could say that Phase One was that.

If we are very, very good, we may even have something said to us about national integrity beyond the two words themselves, and perhaps be told when, how and by whom the Liberals were designated uniquely the keepers of that particular sepulchre.

Meanwhile, Robert Stanfield, David Lewis and Real Caouette have been doing their best to make a campaign of it, but, since the Liberals clearly are the team to beat, each of them has been somewhat inhibited by not wanting to do the ungentlemanly thing and win by default. Certainly none of them wants to waste his time debating with either of the other two.

We notice that Mr. Stanfield has promised a tax reduction to stimulate the economy, and we assume that if it should also stimulate the electorate in the right way on October 30 he won't ask to have any votes disallowed on that account. He has also promised that a Conservative government, unlike the wicked Liberals, would commune with the provinces. The trouble with communing with the provinces is that the Premiers usually arrive in Ottawa already talking and never let up until they go home.

He has also made a strong bid for votes, particularly in his home Province of Nova Scotia, by saying that a Conservative government would give up the claim to offshore resources. That presumably is not intended to include Newfoundland, which contains rich deposits of federal Conservatives.

David Lewis, of course, has latched on to a good thing with his corporate welfare bums issue and it now looks as if this is to be made the key to everything in the New Democratic campaign — The Corporate Welfare Bum, Son of Corporate Welfare Bum, The Corporate Welfare Bum Discovers Foreign Policy, Inadequate Family Allowances Made Him a Corporate Welfare Bum, The Corporate Welfare Bum Joins a Union and Finds Happiness, I Was a Corporate Welfare Bum For the RCMP.

Here in Lilac, the Advance cannot endorse the campaign of Harry Melfort which, essentially, relies on the fact that his opponents all have jobs and that his defeat will only add to unemployment — his.

Timberland Protection Urged by U.S. Forester

An American forester has urged conservationists to press logging companies for a greater commitment to protect B.C. forest lands.

"As I see it there has to be a greater protection afforded to water, fisheries and wildlife resources during timber harvest," said William A. Conway of California.

Conway, consulting forester for the Sierra Club Foundation of the United States, studying forestry and logging practices of U.S. companies operating in British Columbia. His report will be released later this year.

On Tuesday he inspected a Crown Zellerbach logging site in the vicinity of the Nanaimo Lakes.

"I was well received by company officials," he said. "They were frank and open. There was no attempt to hide anything."

Conway noted that while some B.C. companies may have some environmental commitments there appeared to be a need to pass these commitments to men working on the ground in the actual timber harvest.

He explained environmental guidelines are useless unless carried out by men operating in the field.

He said cutting practices don't appear to be planned in such a way to protect the water temperature of streams, wildlife and land erosion.

Home-Grown Kindergarten Thriving

SAHTLAM — Mothers and children are benefitting from the pre-schooler kindergarten set up here a week ago.

The mothers, who take turns working with the class of 12 children, gain good experience and many, who didn't know before, are learning how to occupy their child at home, said Sonja Martineau, one of the organizers. "The children learn to cooperate with each other. This is a big thing, especially where there is an only child."

Mrs. Martineau feels that one of the big drawing cards of the community pre-schooler kindergarten is that the children learn to be away from their mothers before they have to go to school.

"This will help with children who are really attached to their mothers," she said.

The kindergarten has been set up in the new firehall at the small community five miles west of Duncan. It is only for Sahtlam residents.

Mrs. Martineau said the group of mothers decided to try an experimental program because, with a population of

duncan cowichan

Duncan Bureau

300, there are many pre-schoolers.

If the experiment works, which Mrs. Martineau thinks it is, the community hopes to run the kindergarten every winter.

"We are not trying to teach the children anything like their ABCs", Mrs. Martineau said.

The children's time for two hours every Monday to Thursday afternoon is filled with games, coloring, painting, and cutting out. Juice and cookies are provided.

The community is able to run the kindergarten at no cost to parents because the mothers are the instructors.

Each mother spends one day a week with the children, ranging in age from two to four.

Mrs. Martineau noted that with three mothers, being required a day they are only covered for four days a week.

"When there are more children, which means more mothers, hopefully we can have kindergarten Monday to Friday," she said.

We always do our best for you at Woodward's

Pension Plan Waits Word From Ottawa

Workers' Voice at UVic Supported

B.C. wants to hear by Oct. 17 the federal government's position on the NDP government's proposal to institute a $200 monthly income for old age pensioners, Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi said Wednesday.

Levi had just emerged from a 90-minute meeting with Norman Cragg, director-general of the Canada Assistance Plan, and several other federal officials.

Levi said Ottawa is going to have to make "some adjustments" in the Canada Assistance Plan and that he wants a written statement from federal Welfare Minister John Munro, spelling out Ottawa's participation in the program in time for the special session of the B.C. legislature opening Oct. 17.

"I want to be able, when I am in the house to introduce the bill, to tell the people of British Columbia that the position of the federal government is going to be with respect to our $200-a-month guaranteed income plan," Levi told reporters after the meeting.

He said that even if a special meeting of the federal cabinet is required during the election campaign, "whatever is required for them to make the adjustments, I hope they will accommodate us."

After his meeting with Levi, Cragg, who is assistant deputy minister of the department of national health and welfare, said some aspects of the B.C. proposal meet the guidelines of the Canada Assistance Plan, and some do not.

"So what we have to do now is examine them in greater detail to determine to what extent they do meet the conditions and if they don't, what steps need to be taken," Cragg said.

He said there will likely be further ministerial discussions between Victoria and Ottawa. The NDP government wants to raise the guaranteed income supplement portion of the pension, which applies to about 110,000 persons in the province.

The supplement now stands at $41.10 per month and goes on top of the basic pension of $150 per month to make a maximum of $191.10 per month. The NDP government wants to increase the total to $200 per month.

However, the supplement is shareable between federal and provincial governments, under the terms of the Canada Assistance Plan.

So unless agreement is reached between the two governments, B.C. would potentially have to pay the entire difference itself.

Projected total cost of the move is estimated at $45 million for that cost is put at $25 million, if Ottawa comes up with its approximate 50 per cent share.

Premier Barrett says he wants to see the first increases going out to pensioners by Christmas.

The legislation would have to be passed at the forthcoming special session.

Levi said it is now up to the federal government to outline, before Oct. 17, where it stands on the proposal.

Victoria Labor Council Wednesday night endorsed a bid by the Canadian Union of Public Employees for a voice in the administration of the University of Victoria.

CUPE Local 931, representing about 330 workers in office and laboratory classifications, early in September approached university authorities asking for representation on the decision-making body at UVic.

Their bid for a voice in UVic administration — a seat in the senate — they said was not made on the basis of their qualification as academicians. It was made, rather, because of their vested interests.

Many of them, a letter from the CUPE executive to UVic president Dr. Hugh Farquhar said, either have offspring in the university system at present or offspring who will in the near future be entering some university.

The motion to support the CUPE bid, moved by city CUPE member Lew Eckford, a member of Victoria's city hall public employees' union, was supported by the council even after Secretary Larry Ryan pointed out the local in question is not a member of the council.

"The only rider on that (Labor Council support) would be that we would hope the union would come into the council," Ryan said after the meeting.

Ryan told council members he has contacted the CUPE local in question about membership, but got no response.

Speaking to his motion, Eckford told the council the CUPE bid for a voice in university administration is valid because "the university couldn't function without supporting personnel (from CUPE Local 931)."

He said the Victoria Labor Council was morally obligated to support the bid because it "is a significant move on the part of labor" toward a fair voice in the control of society. When the issue went to a vote, there were no dissensions.

Members also approved a resolution for presentation to this year's meeting of the British Columbia Federation of Labor, attacking the British North America Act for advancing apartheid. It said the BNA-act's reference to Indians is "an affront to the human rights principle of equality." It urged the provincial government to seek "entrenchment of the fundamental rights of all Canadians, Indian and non-Indian alike, in the Constitution of Canada."

CRIME CONTROL SHIFT SEEN

Judges who think prison will do a criminal good are handing out more and longer sentences than the "old, punitive, moral judge who knows what he's doing is rather unpleasant," a Scandinavian crime control expert said Wednesday.

A proponent of returning to an evaluation of criminal acts rather than semi-medical treatment of criminals, Oslo University criminologist Dr. Niels Christie told a University of Victoria audience of penal and police officials that judicial systems should look "away from the man and back to the act."

In modern industrial societies where the network of human relationships that formerly controlled crime have largely broken down, he said, the judiciary had been gradually overshadowed by a flood of experts who specialized in fitting fragmented people together.

Where judges once evaluated a known situation, Christie said, a new breed of scientists arose who tried to understand the situation, rather than decide who was right.

For a while it looked as though law was moving into the medical field, he said, quoting figures to show that while the population of Norway rocketed during the last 100 years, the number of judges per capita dropped, and the medical profession burgeoned.

"But it may be that we've come to a point of change," Christie said. "The professionals have educated themselves out of their professional attitude" and there is a return to confrontation with moral issues.

In recent research on differences between forms of punishment and the extent to which criminals return to crime, he said, "it is hard to find a study which shows any form of sanction to be better than another."

Christie predicted that a new emphasis on what actually constitutes a crime, rather than treating criminals, would reveal new areas of crime "which are not currently seen in our societies."

He mentioned war-making, corruption in high places, and "white collar crime."

The judicial system had hitherto taken the "easy way out" of confronting the new problems of gigantism in industrialized societies, he said, by picking on the "easy to hit" conventional criminal core of "young, urban, low-status males."

"Compare this approach with the new fundamental problems of size, specialization and segmentation, all of which create new problems for social control," he said. "For example, who is going to police the police?"

A new, unrecognized dilemma for crime control, Christie said, is that "to control large and powerful units you tend to be large and powerful, but in doing so you tend to encourage growth and the original problems."

Dr. Christie has acted as consultant for a number of Scandinavian governments. His address was the first of four in a UVic department of anthropology and sociology "distinguished visitors seminar series."

BOARD TO APPEAL

Greater Victoria school board will appeal the reinstatement of two tenured teachers by the first board of reference set up under new provincial legislation.

Board chairman Allan McKinnon announced the decision Wednesday following a closed board meeting. The appeal will be heard by the B.C. Court of Appeal.

The teachers said they had been suffering from severe the school board July 15 after they had been absent from teaching duties for nine months, McKinnon said.

Blind Judge Elected in U.S.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — The new judge of the Duval County court is blind.

"I put my blindness on the line at the inception of the campaign," Louis Corbin said Wednesday, the day after winning election in a nonpartisan contest.

Corbin lost his sight at age six in a shotgun accident. He said he doesn't feel he will handicap him in judging people or hearing evidence when he takes office in January.

His opponent in the race, Iven Lamb, had said a county judge must act as a coroner and "view the body."

Blindness, therefore, is "certainly not a qualification," Lamb contended.

Corbin replied that the practice is obsolete, with the county medical examiner's office or a private physician determining cause of death in most homicide cases.

AUSTIN, Tex. — An El Paso firm must pay $2,680 plus attorneys' fees for labels it ordered by mistake from the Monarch Marking Co.

The owner of Reed's Photo Mart, Inc. said he intended to order 4,000 labels but mistakenly ordered four million.

TORONTO — Team Canada hockey star Paul Henderson has turned down an invitation to campaign this weekend with Prime Minister Trudeau in the Oakville area.

Nora Henderson said her husband's decision had nothing to do with the opening home game of Toronto Maple Leafs against Chicago Black Hawks Saturday night.

"It's just that we've had enough excitement to last us for a long while," she said.

NEW YORK — Reports published recently say that reputed underworld leader Carlo Gambino has been suffering from heart trouble. Gambino, 73, alleged leader of all major crime families in the New York area, was listed in "satisfactory" condition Wednesday at Columbus Hospital. The hospital, however, did not say why he was there, nor how long he had been in the hospital.

Tax Appeal Lost

OTTAWA — The Supreme Court of Canada Wednesday dismissed an appeal by the Richardson family grain interests of Winnipeg against imposition of nearly $1.25 million in taxes on some of their 1963-67 incomes.

Mr. Justice D. C. Abbott, presiding over a panel of five judges, dismissed the case from the bench after hearing lawyers argue that arrangements made between Richardson Terminals Ltd., Marine Pipeline and Dredging Ltd., two Richardson firms, were proper and business-like.

The $1,248,878 in taxes had already been paid. Richardson Terminals was appealing against the levy, and took the case to the Supreme Court after the Exchequer Court ruled against it last year.

Richardson Terminals appealed against corporate income tax levies on $3.66 million in profits from a grain terminal at the Lakehead, earned in 1963 to 1967 when the firm was acting as agent for Marine Pipeline, a Richardson firm that previously had piled up losses totalling more than $1.88 million.

Cablevision Lawyer Defends Higher Rates

EDMONTON (CP) — The rates charged by a cable television company should not be primarily determined by the profits that company is making, a representative of Victoria Cablevision Ltd. said Wednesday.

Barrie Adams, lawyer for Victoria Cablevision, told a Canadian Radio-Television Commission hearing that radio and television broadcasting stations do not have their advertising rates regulated and cable companies should not be tied to low charges just because they are making good profits.

Victoria Cablevision is applying for a rate increase to $5 monthly from the present $4.50. It says the increase would be followed by more extensive service to its subscribers in Victoria, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Saanich.

"If the consumer feels it is worth the price to pay for that service, I think that should be the dominant fact," Adams said.

CRTC Chairman Pierre Juneau said that the CRTC believes, in the case of broadcasting stations, that revenue beyond those necessary for a reasonable profit should be used for improved service. The CRTC paid close attention to broadcasters' profits in judging what services they should give.

Juneau suggested that, in the case of Victoria Cablevision's proposed rate increase and expansion, the public might say the company can "quite easily absorb this cost and pay for it out of profits."

At the beginning of the discussion on the rate increase application, David Groos, Liberal MP for Victoria, and representatives of Victoria and Esquimalt argued that the case should be adjourned until Victoria Cablevision provides a financial statement to the public.

J. W. K. Shortreed, an Edmonton lawyer representing the city of Victoria and township of Esquimalt, said that without the statement Cablevision's application cannot be effectively opposed.

Groos said the case should be heard in Victoria or Vancouver so that local people can make their views known. He added that he is not qualified to judge the merits of the application itself.

Juneau, however, rejected the motion for an adjournment. He said Cablevision had complied with CRTC procedure by giving the CRTC its financial statement on a confidential basis.

In testimony on the rate-increase application, Cablevision representatives said they have been charging $4.50 a month for 11 years, providing 11 television channels and 25 FM radio stations.

Adams said the entire Victoria Cablevision system is to be rebuilt, using solid-state equipment instead of tube-type equipment. The new system would be able to provide more than 20 television channels and live local television coverage through a two-way capability.

The two-way capability would permit television signals to be sent by cable to the company studio and then back to all subscribers. The studio would also be enlarged.

Total cost of the modernization and expansion would be $1,375,000 and it would be complete in three years, Adams said.

Replying to questions from CRTC members, he said it would take at least twice as long to finance the project without a rate increase.

John McKeeman of Victoria Cablevision said that the firm would have to go ahead with most of the modernization in any case, even without the rate increase.

He was asked about criticism by Mayor Peter Pollen of Victoria concerning the links between Cablevision and Victoria Press Ltd., publishers of the Colonist and the Times.

Pollen had submitted by mail an intervention stating:

"It should be pointed out that the parent company of Victoria Cablevision Ltd., Premier Cablevision Ltd., is substantially influenced if not controlled by our local daily newspaper company Victoria Press Ltd. We believe that ownership by a virtual monopoly daily press is demonstrably against the public interest."

Adams said he sees nothing wrong with Victoria Press having representatives on the board of Victoria Cablevision and that Victoria Press owns less than 3 per cent of Premier.

He denied that newspaper coverage of the rate-increase application had been affected by the relationship between the companies.

Adams also denied that Victoria Cablevision is buying equipment from Cascade Electronics because Premier has an indirect interest in Cascade.

He said Victoria Cablevision usually bought from Cascade before Premier obtained its indirect interest.

The commission also announced that if pay television develops in Canada, it will be run by companies with broadcasting licences.

The announcement, distributed at CRTC hearings here, said pay television is in an experimental stage but there is growing interest in it. Under the system, viewers pay only for those shows they actually watch.

The CRTC said:

"The commission considers it possible that pay television services will play a significant role in the development of the Canadian broadcasting system, and that it is very much in the public interest to ensure that such services be developed through broadcasting undertakings licensed under the Broadcasting Act."

Asbestos-Cancer Link Strengthened

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
NEW YORK (AP)—Asbestos, already linked with lung cancer in insulation workers who smoke, was further linked Wednesday with cancers of the esophagus, stomach, colon and rectum.

A substantial number of deaths over what would be expected from these cancers were found in a study of insulation workers in the United States and Canada covering the period 1943 through 1971.

The report came from Dr. Irving J. Selikoff of the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York and Dr. E. Oyler Hammond and Herbert Selzman of the American Cancer Society.

Their report was presented to a meeting of a working group formed to assess the biological effects of asbestos, at the International Agency for Research on Cancer, World Health Organization, in Lyon, France. It was made available in New York by the American Cancer Society.

In 1964 and 1965, Selikoff and Hammond reported what they call "the then unexpected finding of a moderate excess of gastro-intestinal cancer among New York insulation workers." The numbers, however, were too small to permit firm conclusions.

"We have now collected additional data," the scientists reported, "and these remain in the same direction, and very much at the same level of excess, two or three times the expected deaths."

The researchers said a similar excess of deaths from cancer of the esophagus, stomach and colon and rectum has been found among insulation workers in Belfast.

In a study of insulation workers in New York and New Jersey, the researchers said, 41 such deaths occurred while only 12.5 had been expected. In a study of workers in the United States and Canada, 55 such deaths occurred while 27.3 were expected.

LITTLE INFORMATION

"Moreover," they continued, "the finding may be of considerable theoretical importance, in view of the dearth of useful hypotheses on the etiology (cause) of gastro-intestinal cancer in general, and cancer of the colon and rectum in particular."

Selikoff and Hammond have reported previously that employment in asbestos insulation work greatly increases the risk of lung cancer in cigarette smokers, but it is uncertain whether the risk is increased among non-smokers.

Their studies have found that approximately one death in five among asbestos insulation workers in the United States is the result of lung cancer, what they call "an extraordinary incidence."

Gov't-Run Cable TV Okay, Says Stanbury

Federal Communications Minister Robert Stanbury said Wednesday night he could see nothing wrong with the Saskatchewan provincial government's owning and operating television cable systems.

But the provincial government would have to be willing to leave the broadcasting role to federal-licensed community organizations, he said.

Application for a broadcasting licence on the part of the government itself would go against more than 35 years of national policy, said Stanbury, who was in town to address the Victoria section of the Canadian Information Processing Society.

He said a special situation prevailed in Saskatchewan, where the telephone service, Sask Tel, is government-owned. (Conventional cable systems are strung on telephone poles leased by private cable companies from the telephone company.)

Private ownership of telecommunications in B.C. (by B.C. Tel.) made the situation different in this province, he said.

Stanbury noted that the final decision in granting broadcasting licences rested with the Canadian Radio-Television Commission under the control of the secretary of state.

In his address to the computer-management group, Stanbury said an impending task force report on privacy and computers indicated that privacy in the face of "ever more efficient information systems" is "not yet a crisis, nor is it out of control."

He said the task force was set up in April, 1971, by his department and the department of justice. The force developed a questionnaire of 72 questions and mailed it to 2,500 operators of data banks. It also conducted field interviews.

The resulting report indicated that "personal information systems" appear to contain more errors than is generally recognized.

"Most institutions store their most sensitive information in manual rather than automated systems," Stanbury said.

The report concluded that "traditional security precautions, in terms of personnel selection for example, are at least as important if not more than sophisticated systems of locks and passwords."

Also "among other trends discerned was the tendency of computerized systems to centralize the storage of data, and therefore to centralize decision-making with a concurrent and contrary trend toward a dispersal of access to the data base through remote terminals."

Possible remedies to any threat to privacy included a code of ethics in the computer business, a government data commissioner, a surveillance agency and a formal regulatory tribunal.

Stanbury said that in the light of the relationship of power and the possession of information, there is a "clear imbalance" between the institutions which collect data, and the individuals about whom data is collected.

"It is not surprising," he said, "that a number of authorities have proposed that individuals be given right of access to their own files, so they can correct any inaccurate information in them and a right to know the uses to which information about them has been put."

Furthermore, no computerized information system exists which directly serves the public, Stanbury said.

"In political terms, a central fact about computers is that they have been used almost exclusively by established institutions, for the obvious reasons that they are expensive and difficult to operate.

"To the extent that these institutions become more efficient through the use of computers, they could exploit this increased power to the detriment of individuals."

He said one of the recommendations of the federal task force was for the allocation of funds to computer-based projects of general social significance.

"A recommendation which I wholeheartedly support."

Getting Paid for It In Professional Sport

With nearly everyone worth his salt getting twice as much gravy as ever before in the National Hockey League, where will it all end? Besides, who dared to mention the World Hockey Association? It has changed many things.

Mostly Money!

That's the root of this evil, as it affects hockey players. But they should worry. They are all going to get nothing but more in take-home-pay. And that was coming no matter how Team Canada fared against Team Russia, or before they baled out in Moscow.

With a brand new major league in the offing and new demands for services rendered, it's a players market in the NHL, if not in the upstart WHA as well.

The WHA is an excellent reason why NHL salaries this year will average about twice as much as they did just six short years ago — before expansion.

And would you believe that hockey ranks second in the field of professional team sport salaries in North America?

No, football isn't first. It's dead last in the four major sports. The highest-paid players in sport, on the average, are basketball players, members of the NBA. They average about $50,000. The ABA half as much. Hockey in the NHL, before the dollar war began with the WHA, paid out an average of $32,000 a player, and football $28,000 or $26,000, depending on whether you listen to the owners, or the players.

The average baseball player's salary is pegged at $31,500.

Bobby Credited With the Blame

There is an excellent article in the current issue of Sport Magazine which puts the matter of player salaries in perspective.

For instance, in baseball, for every player (there are about 20) with a salary in excess of $100,000, there are four ordinary ball players who are drawing the absolute minimum of $13,500. This will be revised upwards by next year, Ferguson Jenkins, Canada's contribution to the Chicago Cubs, and six-year 20-game winner, hinted as much recently. He said there will be another player's strike if the minimum isn't hoisted at least $20,000 to $15,500. Plus other fringe benefits, of course, and why stop there?

Bobby Hull, I guess, could be blamed, or credited, for much of the latest escalation in the hockey dollar war. He got something like $2.75 million from owner Ben Haskin in Winnipeg just for taking a chance for five years with the Jets, of the WHA. He also got a bonus of a cool million dollars. This was to show the good faith of the new league to other players from the old.

Boston's Derek Sanderson got the message quickly enough and at last report, had decided to play for the Philadelphia Blazers for, get this: $500,000 a year.

If this appears to make everybody else, including Boston's No. 4, Bobby Orr, a piker, it isn't necessarily so.

Nearly everyone else is getting in on the good thing, in one form or another. Most of the claim jumpers from the NHL to the WHA aren't telling all they got when they made the switch, and several of the loyal remaining NHL players aren't revealing what secret deals they entered into before they decided to stay where they were, either. Deferred income, fringe benefits, bonuses, and special loan deals, simply can't be expressed in figures and won't.

'Hundred-Grand' Club Fills Up

Okay, let's take Bobby Orr. It was just last year that he signed a contract for $180,000 per, and worth every nickel of it, too. Phil Esposito settled for a mere $125,000. Care to wager that they don't make more than that, in one form or another? Brad Park, for example, now makes $200,000. Vic Hadfield almost as much, and it's doubtful if Boston would trade Orr and Esposito for the New York stars, even. Would anyone?

By the way, it was only three years ago that Park was agreeable to play in the NHL for $12,000 a season!

A few years ago, too, there were only four registered members in the NHL $100,000 club — Gordie Howe, Hull, Esposito and Orr.

Last year, Tim Horton, Stan Mikita, Frank Mahovlich and Carl Brewer among others, took out their membership. This season the list of new members isn't complete yet; and if many are clamoring at the door, one player is already through it.

Cowboy Bill Flett, a former Cougar, has made it. He is now a $100,000-a-year-man, plus!

That's a lot of bread, man, even for a cowboy.

Here's Your Chance To Gain an Appetite

You don't even need to enter — just show up and run.

And it might be a good way to work up a good appetite for your turkey dinner.

Participation and informality are the keys in the Thanksgiving Day cross-country meet being held by Invictus at Thetis Lake Park Monday.

The all-comers event, which starts at 2 p.m., encompasses four runs — for 13-and under, 17-and under, open and recreational runners — and has no entry fee or prizes.

Distances vary from 1½ miles to four miles.

Invictus chairman Ron Bowker explained the informality of the meet:

"The object of the run is to provide a competitive opportunity for the rapidly increasing number of serious cross-country athletes in the Greater Victoria area as well as to provide a recreational opportunity for the not-so-serious individuals."

The robust Boston Bruin winger discovered Wednesday night his misadventures could be just as costly within the friendly NHL confines as they are elsewhere.

He was sitting out a minor sentence when Walt Tkaczuk scored the tying goal for New York Rangers in a 3-3 pre-season game at Boston.

In other NHL exhibition action, three members of the now defunct Team Canada—Serge Savard, Pete Mahovlich and Yvan Cournoyer scored for Montreal Canadiens in a 3-4 win over Toronto Maple Leafs, Pittsburgh Penguins jolted Chicago Black Hawks 4-2, Los Angeles Kings routed starting Oct. 29 at Napa, Calif.

Morgan was fifth low qualifier in the preliminary school at Fremont, Calif., where 150 players competed over four rounds for 26 openings at Napa.

He had rounds of 74, 70, 73 and 71 for a par 288 total.

Three other B.C. golfers were far off to pace (it took 291 to advance). Norm Reid of Vancouver Club, Jim Nolan of Grandview Driving Range and Tom Whittle of Lions Golf Centre each had 310 totals.

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — New York Islanders acquired veteran defenseman Arnie Brown and goalie Gerry Gray from Detroit Red Wings in exchange for goalie Denis Dejordy Wednesday.

Players Make Rugby Team

Eight Victoria players were included on the 23-man squad named Wednesday night from which a side will be selected to play New Zealand All-Blacks in Vancouver Oct. 18.

Two New Zealand-born Victorians, scrum-half Bruce Howe of Oak Bay Wanderers and winger Dave Leonard of James Bay Athletic Association, were included on the roster.

Other Victorians selected were forwards Gailther Zinkan and Rod Hindson of the University of Victoria; forward Ken Wilke and centre Alan Rees of Castaways; stand-off half Tim Cummings of Oak Bay and centre Stu Barber of James Bay.

Maplettes Floundering

Victoria Maplettes, one of the top women's basketball teams in Canada, are in danger of folding.

Moe Turner, who coached the Maplettes for the past two seasons and to the national title in his first year, is going to concentrate his efforts this season with First United Saints, the team that captured the Canadian juvenile girls' crown last spring in Victoria.

"I told the kids at the end of last season that I didn't want to coach them again this year," said Turner. "There just aren't enough good players around. It's as simple as that."

The history of the team includes three national victories in the past five seasons — as Rawlins in 1967-68, and 1968-69 and as Maplettes in 1970-71. University of British Columbia won the title in 1969-70 and University of Victoria Vikettes were winners at the end of last season.

In Japanese Rugby Life Begins at 70

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Life may begin at 40 tonight for players on Victoria Ebb Tide and the touring Wak Wak rugby team of Japan, but for scrum half Tsukasa Shirasaka, it's still going strong at 70.

Shirasaka, manager of an import-export firm in Kobe, will be in the Wak Wak lineup at Royal Athletic Park for the first of two games the Japanese 40-and-over side is playing in British Columbia.

This is his 50th year as a rugby player. "I started playing when I was 20 at the Keio University in Tokyo," he explained in English at last night's welcoming reception at Victoria Golf Club.

He added that he has had no international experience.

"I'm sorry," he apologized. "I'm too small. I'm only a local player."

Apologies Unnecessary

Shirasaka was the last man in the room who had to make apologies. A rigorous training schedule, including exercises every Wednesday night at a Kobe sports club, two miles of running each morning before breakfast and a couple of rugby games each weekend have kept him in better shape than most men a fraction of his age.

He weighs 110 pounds and hasn't gained an ounce since his college days.

Not bad for a man with eight grandchildren.

"When I go running some of my friends think I'm crazy," he chuckled. So he often runs with his two oldest granddaughters, ages 12 and 8.

Shirasaka is a charter member of the Wak Waks, who come from the Osaka area. The club started 25 years ago and regularly competes with other over-40 sides in Japan, where rugby has been played since the early 1900s.

Shirasaka, in fact, has started something of a rugby dynasty in his home land. He has two sons who played the game in university and a daughter is married to a rugby player.

He can hardly wait for his 3-year-old grandson to start.

"Another two years," he estimated last night.

He prides himself on the fact that he's the only player on the Wak Wak side eligible to wear yellow pants. As he explained it, the over-40 players on the team wear white trousers, the over-50s blue, the over-60s red and the 70-and-over segment, which numbers only Shirasaka, wears yellow.

He waived his pants privileges last night in favor of conventional grey flannels and blazer.

Shirasaka, however, isn't the only Wak Wak eligible for membership in the Geritol set. Seven other players are in their 60s.

Admits to 55

That puts the Ebb Tide side, which was organized for tonight's game which begins at 7:30, to shame. Although there's some question as to how many of the Vancouver Island old boys are being honest about their ages, at least David MacKenzie admits to 55.

That makes the headmaster of Brentwood College the oldest man on the Canadian team, which one of the Japanese officials last night referred to as "youth power."

The Wak Waks, whose team name translates roughly into those who have gone astray, arrived from Osaka yesterday afternoon. They spent today touring Butchart Gardens and Oak Bay Marina and 10 of them played golf.

Shirasaka wasn't among the golfers. Presumably he was off running.

The Japanese team leaves Friday for Vancouver and meets a 40-and-over side at Brockton Oval Saturday. Premier David Barrett is scheduled to play for the Canadians in that one.

Those are the only two games the visitors have on their tour. They return home via San Francisco and Honolulu.

One man obviously impressed by the Wak Waks last night was Ebb Tide captain Harry Turner, a former forward for James Bay Athletic Association.

Wasted on Young

He noted how fit the older Japanese opponents appeared.

"In British Columbia," he concluded, "we're probably wasting a lot of rugby on the young."

Peter Clarke of Cowichan, coach of Victoria Ebb Tide, has named his starting lineup for the match.

Scheduled to start in the backfield are Don Burgess (Oak Bay), Pat McLachlan (Cowichan), Ray Caltan (Oak Bay), Gerry Main (Oak Bay), Jack Patrick (James Bay), Bob Hutchison (Oak Bay) and Gord Hemmingsway (Saanich Velox).

NOTHING TO IT: Tsukasa Shirasaka, 70-year-old Japanese rugby player who will see action tonight at Royal Athletic Park when touring Wak Wak side meets Ebb Tide.

shows some of his Canadian counterparts how he stays in shape. Shirasaka, who has been playing rugby 50 years, regularly does pushups and runs two miles a day.

Cashman's Back Home And He Hasn't Changed

By Canadian Press
One thing National Hockey League owners discovered during Team Canada's European jaunt was how much they missed their players.

One thing Wayne Cashman apparently didn't learn on that same international hockey extravaganza was how much his team could miss him.

The robust Boston Bruin winger discovered Wednesday night his misadventures could be just as costly within the friendly NHL confines as they are elsewhere.

He was sitting out a minor sentence when Walt Tkaczuk scored the tying goal for New York Rangers in a 3-3 pre-season game at Boston.

In other NHL exhibition action, three members of the now defunct Team Canada—Serge Savard, Pete Mahovlich and Yvan Cournoyer scored for Montreal Canadiens in a 3-4 win over Toronto Maple Leafs, Pittsburgh Penguins jolted Chicago Black Hawks 4-2, Los Angeles Kings routed Vancouver Canucks 4-1 and Minnesota North Stars took St. Louis Blues 4-1.

In games with minor pro teams, Atlanta Flames edged Hershey Bears of the American League 4-3 and California Golden Seals lost 5-3 to Salt Lake Golden Eagles of the Western League.

The Leafs-Canadiens game at Montreal held little in the way of excitement other than that generated by Jacques Lemaire's winner with less than two minutes remaining. Guy Lafleur added the other Canadiens score. Dave Keon, with two, Denis Duperre and Randy Osburn scored for Toronto.

The Canucks showed a weakness on defence before a sellout crowd of 15,570 at Pacific Coliseum and Los Angeles was quick to capitalize.

The Kings led 2-0 in the first period on goals by Butch Goring and Bob Berry and Gilles Marotte added another before Jocelyn Guevremont broke Rogatien Vachon's bid for a shutout.

Mike Corrigan finished off the scoring but Vachon was hard-pressed to hold off good scoring efforts from Vancouver's Gerry O'Flaherty, Orland Kurtenbach and Don Lever.

The North Stars got behind 1-0 in St. Louis on Mike Murphy's score in the first minute of play, but took the lead before the period ended on goals by Dennis Hextall and Jude Drouin. Charlie Burns and Buster Harvey completed the rout.

Rookie Jacques Richard and veteran defenceman Noel Price scored 42 seconds apart late in the game to give Atlanta the win at Hershey.

In World Hockey Association play, Minnesota Fighting Saints won their third game in four nights Wednesday, edging Chicago Cougars 3-2 at Hibbing, Minn.

Elsewhere, Ron Anderson's three goals paced Alberta Oilers to a 6-3 win over Winnipeg Jets and New England Whalers dressed all their former National League players for a 5-2 win over Ottawa Nationals.

Jacklin Sets Record

NEWCASTLE, England (AP) — Tony Jacklin of Britain scored a record 65 on the Gosforth Park course Wednesday to lead the field of 50 in the first round of the Dunlop Masters golf tournament.

Another Briton, Guy Hunt, and American Bob Mitchell were one-stroke behind with 66s. Al Balding of Toronto carded a 73.

Cougars open the home season against Calgary Centennials beginning at 8:30 p.m. Saturday in Memorial Arena.

Victoria Gains First-Place Tie In Volleyball

Victoria gained a first-place tie with Mt. Douglas in the Victoria senior high school Boys' Volleyball League by winning four straight games on home boards Wednesday.

The Victoria team bumped Mount View 15-5, 15-3 and dropped Reynolds 15-3, 15-5.

At Belmont, Mt. Douglas dropped its first game 15-12 to Claremont before recovering to beat the same team 15-9. Mt. Douglas also downed Belmont 15-10, 15-3.

In the "A" division of the Senior Girls' League, Reynolds also won four games to collect a tie for the lead with Belmont, which lost one game.

Playing in its own gym, Reynolds blanked St. Ann's 15-0, 15-0 and defeated Victoria 15-7, 15-5. Victoria also beat St. Ann's in both games.

Rodgers Leads Pacific Masters

INZAI, Japan (Reuter) — With some magic putting that produced seven birdies, Californian Phil Rodgers took the first-round lead in the world's richest golf tournament Wednesday with a five-under-par 66.

Rodgers, 34, held a one-stroke lead over fellow Californians Gay Brewer and Al Gelberger and Australian David Graham in the $300,000 Pacific Masters tournament, but predicted he wouldn't stay in front for long.

Cougars All Set for Tonight

Mitch Pechet, coach of Victoria Cougars, has announced his lineup for the Western Canada Hockey League opener tonight in New Westminster.

Sam Clegg will start in goal against the Bruins with 15-year-old Dan Rogers serving as backup. Clegg came to the Cats this week from Saskatoon Blades to fill a gap created when Ron Bourcier, expected to be the club's first-string goalie, was suspended for a curfew violation during training camp.

Murray Worley, one of three holdovers from last season, is paired on defence with Rick Williams. Blake Robinson, another sophomore, partners Kim Clarkson while Cal Kitching and Peter Lemon form the third defensive duo.

Centre Don Williams, right-winger Frank Hyndman and left-winger Dale Cook, the most impressive forward unit during training camp and pre-season exhibition games, will remain intact.

Bruins are missing 10 of last season's players, including six who accounted for 200 goals during the regular schedule — Lorne Henning, Bernie Lukowicz, Alex Kogler, Ken Ireland, Don Martineau and Les Jackson.

However, goalie Terry Richardson, who finished second only to John Davidson of Calgary in goals-against average among regular netminders, is back.

Vancouver Nats play in Medicine Hat against Tigers in the other season-opener tonight.

Cougars open the home season against Calgary Centennials beginning at 8:30 p.m. Saturday in Memorial Arena.

Tonight's Cougar game will be broadcast on radio station CJVI (900) starting at 8:30.

The Waterfowl Season Will Open With a Bang

Estuaries, mud flats, ponds and the rare Vancouver Island stubble field will resound this weekend to the flatbloom of shotguns. Saturday marks the opening of the waterfowl season. All waterfowlers will beg for stormy weather to keep the ducks flying. Bluebird days are their last wish. Ducks, geese and snipe open Saturday with the exception of Black Brant, which opens next March 1. Season's end is Jan. 7, allowing waterfowlers ample opportunity to capitalize on the stormy fall weather. Hunters are reminded that a federal migratory game bird hunting permit is necessary and sells for $2 at post office.

B.C. director of Ducks Unlimited, Bernie Forbes, recently outlined the five-year, five-area priority plan undertaken for B.C.

The first stage, began in the late '60s, was the appointment of an area manager at Creston to program efforts at the provincial waterfowl management area on Duck Lake.

This year saw the second stage with the appointment of Mike Yates as area manager in Williams Lake. Yates administers work in the Central Interior Plateau with the major objective to improve nesting habitat in the Cariboo.

The Prairies have been recognized as the duck factories of North America, but recent emphasis in B.C. demonstrates the unique habitat in the province and its importance to the Pacific flyway. Expansion here is paralleled by expansion in the Maritimes, with a $3,000,000 budget supported primarily by U.S. sportsmen.

The third priority is an inventory of the Peace River area. Work has started there this fall.

The fourth phase, a 70,000-acre flood plain in the Columbia Marshes also is under study but requires a special projects team, according to Forbes, because of its unique problems. This area has early nesting geese who may be in serious danger with spring floods wiping out their nesting.

Vancouver Island and coastal estuaries are the fifth phase. Ducks Unlimited will consider areas like Cape Scott, Tofino and others as they are catalogued.

This past summer the federal government announced a $5 million fund for a federal-provincial crop depredation program. Lure crops will be produced to reduce farm crop destruction by waterfowl as well as funds provided for provincial crop damage compensation programs.

Unfortunately, B.C. still does not have a compensatory program as do the Prairie provinces, with the result that the program will not cover B.C. farmers.

The annual damage caused by ducks trampling swaths and eating unharvested grain is estimated by the Fish and Wildlife service at $6 million.

Delegates from 14 regions in the province met in Delta at the Man and Resources conference last weekend.

The conference is sponsored at the regional, provincial and federal level by provincial and federal resource and environment ministers. The objective is to get a "grassroots" opinion from the public on major environment and resource problems.

Lloyd Brooks, Deputy Minister of Recreation and Conservation, opened the conference by noting its unique structure. While funded by government, the organization of public opinion has been given to the B.C. Natural Resources Conference, an independent body.

"In the past," said Brooks, "industry has led with its experts and citizens have followed. Today, however, the roles are reversed with citizens demanding more part in the decision-making process as it relates to the environment."

Twelve delegates were chosen to represent B.C. at the national conference early in November. Vancouver Island representation will be strong with six delegates from the three regions. Elected were Jim Campbell, Gulf Islands; Dr. W. Greenwood, Victoria; Howard English, Victoria; Barry Thornton, Comox; Keith Seguin, Gold River, and Nelson Allen, Nanaimo.

The delegates are to present priorities and problems outlined by the provincial conference to the new government.

Only Playoffs Count Now

By Associated Press
"People don't relate to past performances," said manager Bill Virdon of Pittsburgh Pirates. "They relate to playoffs and whether you win or lose."

And for Virdon and his Pirates and Cincinnati Reds, the regular National League season is "past performances," and their immediate future is the league playoffs. Pittsburgh, the East champions, ended the season Wednesday night, losing to Bob Gibson and St. Louis Cardinals, 4-3.

Cincinnati, meanwhile, beat Houston Astros, the team that has been chasing the Reds in the West, 4-2. In other games, San Francisco Giants beat San Diego Padres 6-4, Philadelphia Phillies edged Chicago Cubs 2-1, Los Angeles Dodgers downed Atlanta Braves 4-2 and New York Mets topped Montreal Expos 3-1.

Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson said his club is ready and, actually, much better than his league champion team of 1970. "This has been our best pitching staff in three years I've been here," said Anderson. "This time in 1970, our staff was about at its worst."

Gibson, who finished the season with a 19-11 record, helped his own cause against Pittsburgh by driving in the Cards' first run with a fifth-inning single. He also reached the 200-strikeout plateau—he fanned 11 Pirates to run his total to 208—for the ninth season.

Johnny Bench hit a fifth-inning sacrifice fly to provide the Reds winning run. Tony Perez drove in two runs. Bobby Bonds hit a three-run homer in the eighth to give San Francisco its margin of victory over San Diego.

A pinch-hit home run by Deron Johnson in the eighth broke a 1-1 tie and gave Philadelphia a victory over Chicago Cubs.

Claude Osteen scattered eight hits to win his 20th game for Los Angeles. He was backed by two home runs by Steve Yeager and one by Tom Paciorek.

Jim Beauchamp's two-run homer in the sixth inning broke a 1-1 tie and gave New York Mets' rookie Jon Matlack his 15th victory.

Tigers' Old Men Slight Favorites

By Associated Press

Detroit Tigers have won the chips in the American League East Division and now head west for a game of higher stakes against Oakland Athletics.

"They call us the over-the-hill gang and things like that because of all the veterans on our squad," says Tiger pitcher Mickey Lolich, "but I don't think we're that bad."

Apparently Las Vegas bookies don't think that the Tigers are that bad, either. They're rated a toss-up to win the best-of-five-game series from the Athletics, winners in the West Division.

The Tigers closed out the regular season Wednesday with a meaningless 4-1 loss to the second-place Boston Red Sox.

"Look at the record," says Lolich. "It was the old-timers who did it."

"Al Kaline's been playing great. I pitched a good game the other night. Woody Fryman's an older player and he pitched great."

The Athletics nipped California Angels 2-1 Wednesday. In the other games, Minnesota Twins pounded Chicago White Sox 4-2, Milwaukee Brewers checked New York Yankees 1-0 and Kansas City Royals blanked the Texas Rangers 4-0.

No matter the psyched-up state of Detroit's East champions, Oakland manager Dick Williams awaits their arrival with confidence.

"The club we'll play, has been my preference," says Williams. "That's mainly because we have had better success against the Tigers than the Red Sox."

The Athletics took the season series from the Tigers, eight games to four.

Four Managers Retain Posts

By CANADIAN PRESS

Team managers look the spotlight Wednesday as baseball's major leagues wrapped up the 1972 regular schedule. Billy Martin of Detroit Tigers, Eddie Kasko of Boston Red Sox, Frank Quilici of Minnesota Twins and Ken Aspromonte of Cleveland Indians were all rehired by their American League clubs.

The clubs announced that Martin and Quilici signed on for another year, Kasko for two years and Aspromonte put his name to a "multi-year" contract.

Martin's agreement with the American League East Division champions was an apparent change of mind.

He had said Tuesday night, after the Tigers clinched the divisional title by beating Boston 3-1 that he had already refused such an offer.

When Martin joined the Tigers two years ago, he was given a two-year contract.

After the 1971 season, it was extended through the 1973 season. This is the second one-year extension of his contract, reported to be in the $55,000-a-year range.

Kasko, considered on the way out just two months ago, before the Red Sox made their dramatic climb into the American League East championship race, received an estimated $10,000 increase to $60,000.

Aspromonte's salary was not announced. The club said only that he had signed a multi-year contract.

Dinghy Sailors Take Spotlight on Shawnigan Lake

Dinghy sailors from several parts of Vancouver Island will be at Shawnigan Lake this weekend for the annual fall regatta of Strathcona Lodge School.

At least seven of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's Laser fleet will be there and the Fireball fleet of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, is expected to turn out in good numbers.

Enterprise sailors from Nanaimo, Duncan and Royal Vic will compete and Seafly sailors from the Elk Lake Sailing Association will be well represented.

The Salt Spring Sailing Club will be there with a fleet of Sabots. Boys from Glenlyon, Shawnigan Lake Boys' School and Brentwood College will be competing in Flying Juniors, Fireballs and Sabots.

Tony Markle, who is handling regatta arrangements,

AROUND OUR SHORES

expects almost 150 competitors.

Along with the class racing, there'll be a three-race series of inter-school Sabot competition. Registration gets under way 9 a.m. Saturday with the first race getting a start gun at 10:30 a.m. Sunday's racing will begin at 10 a.m.

Members of the Victoria Canoe Club head for Rebecca spit on Quadra Island Saturday for a holiday weekend of fun. Peter Van Dyke is in charge of the expedition and can be reached at 598-2048.

For those VCC members who prefer to stay closer to home, Dan Johnston will lead a "splash session" at Thetis Lake Sunday at 1:30 p.m.

Dan reports there'll be a little slalom racing and an opportunity for members to get to know their canoes and kayaks better. His number is 592-7573.

Royal Vic keel boats will combine racing and cruising over the holiday weekend.

They'll head for Bedwell Harbor on Pender Island Saturday, making it a 19-mile from Cadboro Bay. Start time is 10 a.m. If the weather doesn't co-operate the race will be postponed until Sunday.

The race is open to boats from the Turkey Head Sailing Association and should prove the beginning of a lively weekend at Bedwell.

Forty-seven boats competed in THSA's two races, held off Oak Bay Marina last Sunday. Lack of wind forced a shortened three-mile course for the first sailout of which Jan Hubers' Sea Spell was overall winner. After her came Gordie Vickery's Valhalla, Frank Rhodes' Ouzo, Ian Duncan's Kim, John Booth's Umpka, Peter Young's Zest, Nigel Scott-Moncrieff's Toots, Greg Oliver's Sea Fax III, Steve Merriman's Vandal and Rod McBride's Lemolo.

Hugh Porter's Exigal was first over-all in the second race which was lengthened to 4½ miles. Sea best out Toots, Valhalla, Ouzo, John Parkes' Bon Homie, Sea Fax III, Lemolo, Sea Spell, Zest and Vandal.

Light winds also plagued the 35 Canoe Bay Sailing Club boats that competed in a six-mile in Sidney waters on Sunday.

Peter White's White Squall was over-all winner of the six boats that managed to finish within the time limit. She was followed by Miles Dighton's Obsession, Brian Saunders' Impulse, Bud Peetz's Saki, Will Jensen's Viking 28 and Walter Stenner's Encore.

Local sailors, shopping around for a boat in the half ton class have been keeping a weather eye on the four-race series in West Vancouver for the Canadian Half Ton Championship.

It finished with a 90-miler last weekend, Vladimir Plavsik's Scampi Orso winning both it and the championship. Vladimir amassed a total of 58½ points, compared to second place finalist, Gerry Kidd's C and C 27, Hullabaloo.

Gerry, whose magazine, Pacific Yachting, presented the trophy, earned a total of 51½ points.

He reports that his Canadian-designed boat could hold Orso offwind and on the beat up to 10 knots, but when the wind increased the Swedish Orso took off like the champion she is.

California designer Bill Lapworth had two of his Cal T-2s in the championships, but they failed to impress mainland half-tonners.

They appear to be sluggish in light breezes compared to others in the class.

Don Martin of Royal Van, one of Canada's top sailors and skipper of the crew that beat the easterners in our national version of the America's Cup, did manage to get 42½ points and third spot with his Gastel II, but his sailing buddies attribute this more to his skill than his boat.

They're saying the same about Dr. George Wilkins, Canadian champion in Dragons. He raced his Cal T-2 Marguerite to fourth position with a total of 36 points.

Anderson Sets Tanker Appeal

Provincial Liberal leader David Anderson has gone to Washington, D.C., to launch an appeal Friday in a bid to halt the Alaska oil pipeline.

In August, the U.S. District Court ruled the pipeline could proceed.

Joining Anderson in the appeal Friday will be a number of environmental organizations claiming the proposed pipeline would damage the environment.

It is expected the court will not hear the appeal but will refer the question to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Anderson and the environment groups have argued that the U.S. environmental study on the effects of the pipeline are incomplete because they do not take into account the effects of a parallel gas pipeline.

Gas is produced along with the oil and under U.S. law it can not be burned off and can not be pumped back into the ground for longer than 12 months so it would have to be moved from the site, presumably by pipeline.

The Supreme Court will rule on whether an environmental impact study is needed on the gas pipeline question.

Bankers Take Prizes

Four Victoria bankers have received $100 awards from the Institute of Canadian Bankers for outstanding performance in a banking course at the University of Victoria.

Mrs. L. J. Bullas of the Royal Bank of Canada received her award for "Introduction to Banking." Of the same bank, Mrs. A. K. Peltier's was for "Business Administration" and R. T. Foster's for "Communications."

R. G. Crick of the Toronto-Dominion Bank wrote on "Economics."

The four were among 177 banker students, at 42 different universities, who received a total of 189 awards.

Hornett To Head Mariners

George Hornett, 4811 W. Saanich, has been elected president of the marine branch (unlicensed) local, B.C. Government Employees Union by a mail-in vote in which 1,300 of 1,700 members participated.

The election follows a period of more than one month in which the local was directed by Dick Larsen of Vancouver, a Canadian Labor Congress representative.

Larsen was placed in temporary charge of the local after a difference of opinion within the union executive resulted in the resignation of all five table officers of the union.

Other officers elected Saturday are: Ron Carroll, first vice-president; Lorne Blain, second vice-president; Art Nieman, secretary-treasurer and Irene Grant, recording secretary.

Dental Plan Under Study Says Cocke

Health Minister Dennis Cocke said today the province is actively considering bringing dental care under the provisions of the B.C. Medical Plan.

Cocke said this morning discussions have been held between him and B.C. College Dentists' president Dr. Douglas McDougall.

He said the matter is "under study" but that the government "is certainly not going to move too quickly into anything that we just can't handle."

He said considerably more planning will have to go into the idea before action can be taken and added that no legislation has been scheduled for the near future.

"There is a realistic possibility that the delivery of dental care will be changed to some degree in the future," CHARGES

"There is a realistic possibility that the delivery of dental care will be changed to some degree in the future," Cocke told reporters before this morning's cabinet meeting.

He said the province is looking at dental care operations in Saskatchewan and in New Zealand with an eye toward adapting these systems for use in B.C.

"We are taking a look at these other ways. We're not going to jump into things."

Comments Coming On Rents

Premier Barrett said today the government will have "some comments to make" on the subject of rents when legislation on old age pensions is introduced in this month's special session of the legislature.

Barrett was commenting on a letter from the B.C. Tenants' Organization which requested that the NDP government impose a rent freeze in order to protect pension increases coming to B.C. elderly citizens.

The premier acknowledged that the provincial government has the right to freeze rents but did not indicate that legislation freezing rents in the province will be forthcoming in the special session.

"When the legislation is introduced there will be comments made," was all he had to say.

Carlos Closes

Wednesday

Carlos Almeida's Mayfair barber shop was closed Wednesday after the firm was acquitted on a recent charge of contravening a municipal bylaw by remaining open on a Monday.

Almeida discovered the firm is subject to another bylaw which obligates him to close Wednesdays.

The company was charged by Victoria Barber's Union secretary Len Stephenson under a 1958 bylaw which stipulates barber shops must close on Wednesdays.

But the firm was charged with opening Monday, July 10, which comes under a 1964 optional closing day bylaw.

Judge Harold Alder ruled that unless formal application is made to operate under the 1964 optional closing day bylaw, the proprietors are automatically subject to the 1958 bylaw.

Stephenson said after the trial he would lay a new charge if the shop had been open Wednesday.

Almeida said he plans to close Wednesdays at least until December.

SCHOOL VOTE ASKED

A new high school and additions to nearly all inner zone elementary schools in the Colwood-Langford-Metchosin area are proposed by Sooke School District for a December referendum.

Approval of the new provincial government is being sought for a $2.95 million referendum to be placed before ratepayers in municipal elections Dec. 9.

District superintendent E. E. Hyndman said population growth in the area had produced a growth rate of more than 10 per cent annually. By 1981 it is estimated 30,530 persons will live in the inner zone, compared with 13,717 in 1961.

A Junior high school is projected for the northeastern part of the area, likely north of Trans-Canada Highway near Millstream or Goldstream.

Elizabeth Fisher Junior and Belmont Senior secondary complex on Jacklin Road has an enrolment of 1,500 pupils today and in four years will have more than 2,600, Hyndman said.

Such growth makes for an unwieldy teaching situation, he said.

Belmont had grown faster than the junior high in the past six years, a total of 95 per cent.

Most of the $2.95 million program will be spent on secondary facilities, in a ratio of 3-1 to elementary construction.

It is proposed to add classrooms, library and activity centre, washroom facilities and other expansion at such schools as Langford, Happy Valley, Savary, Metchosin, Colwood and Sangster, with improvements at Saanichton and Edward Milne.

WITNESSES SOUGHT IN STORE ROBBERY

Colwood RCMP have requested assistance from anyone who may have seen anything suspicious at the scene of a $12,000 robbery at Colwood Shop Easy between 9 p.m. and midnight Monday, Staff Sgt. Lloyd Smith said today.

He said the robbery may have occurred at that time because it's the only time the store is empty.

RCMP have interviewed "about 20 employees, former employees and independent people" so far but have made no progress, said Smith.

More Cafes Face Closure

Greater Victoria's senior public health officer said today three or four more restaurants are under consideration for closure because they are not meeting cleanliness standards.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread also revealed a farmers' market had been shut down recently because it did not have proper facilities for the prepared food it was selling. He declined to name the establishment.

A week ago Whitbread said four restaurants had been shut down because health inspectors found unsanitary conditions. They were all able to re-open within 24 hours after cleaning up.

Today he said the crackdown on sloppy housekeeping by all establishments handling food will continue.

"I don't think one can be lenient when it comes to poor sloppy housekeeping in the kitchens of restaurants or in the rest of the restaurant."

Bakeries, butcher stores and supermarkets will all be involved in the tougher inspection program, he said. The health inspection staff will check out promptly any complaints coming to it.

There are 11 health inspectors operating through the metro health board's jurisdiction, Whitbread said. It's hoped that all establishments handling food could be checked every two to four months. Inspections are undertaken on a no prior notice basis.

Press Supporting 'Cultural Genocide'

The press was accused Wednesday night of being party to the cultural genocide of Canada.

Donald Munro, Progressive Conservative candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich, speaking at an all-candidates meeting in Camosun College, accused the media of being irresponsible.

"On the weekend," he said, "I examined Victoria's two daily newspapers, The Saturday afternoon paper carried 10 different stories out of 14 on the front page that had originated outside of Canada. The bulk of these 10 stories were from the United States."

He said the same applied to the Sunday morning paper. He told one meeting, called by one Victoria chapter of the committee for an Independent Canada he stands for inentives to business, strengthening of export trade, the merchant marine and more investment by Canadians in their own inheritance.

Louis Lindholm, Liberal candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich and Flemming Hansen, New Democratic Party candidate for Victoria differed over the policy of governing foreign investment in Canada.

Hansen contended that all new foreign investment should be 51 per cent controlled in Canada. He said that 70 per cent of Canada's economy was controlled from the outside.

Both he and Roger Smith, NDP candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich, said Canadians would be prepared to tighten their belts if it allowed them to win back control of their affairs.

Lindholm said that control of foreign investments had to be approached in a gradual program otherwise massive unemployment would result.

He described the takeover proposals of NDP politicians as "irresponsible."

He stressed that control — not ownership — of foreign interests in Canada was vital. He, too, stressed that Canada's merchant marine should be strengthened so that Canadian goods could be exported in "Canadian bottoms."

Allan McKinnon, PC candidate for Victoria, arriving late at the meeting which about 75 attended, said all foreign companies in Canada should have at least three Canadians serving on their boards.

He added that these companies should be required to give a true accounting of their costs and profits, particularly the costs of borrowing money.

John Tisdale, Social Credit candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich, quipped about Prime Minister Trudeau's 1968 campaign promises:

"Trudeau, in 1968, said he would promise nothing to B.C. — and he's kept that promise."

Both he and Cliff Stretch, SC candidate for Victoria, said the Bank of Canada should be used to extend loans to Canadians, the same way as it does to newly emerging countries.

Dan Heffernan, Independent candidate for the Victoria riding, said that less than seven per cent of Canadians could afford to own their own homes.

He advocated that all mortgage payments should be made tax-deductible, and called for more federal grants for housing.

Heffernan also said that "all tax cuts should be taken away from industries who don't meet pollution standards."

Short Siege at UIC Brings Fast Results

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

For three months, 22-year-old Barbara Burghardt battled to get her unemployment insurance payments. On Monday her patience worn out and car loan payments mounting, she took her sleeping bag to the Unemployment Insurance Commission offices all set for a long siege.

A call to the Times brought a photographer and a reporter to investigate. On Wednesday Miss Burghardt, 544 Mount View, received seven cheques in the mail—two more than she was owed.

"I'm very happy," she said. "I've made the payment on my car (a two-year-old Dodge Dart) and I've got $100 in the bank for the next one."

"I visited the UIC offices 12 or 13 times trying to get my cheques, which they admitted were owed me since July 9. I only got action after calling the Times and arriving with my bedroll."

Miss Burghardt worked as a teacher's aide for retarded children with Sooke School Board for four years. She said she was not rehired for this year because she could no longer accept differences with the school principal.

She paid unemployment insurance throughout her period of employment, she said.

"The unemployment office just kept saying they would contact Vancouver for the money they said I was owed."

The two extra cheques she received on Wednesday were duplicates of others that came in the mail, Miss Burghardt said. She intends to return them.

"There's just no work to be had—it's that simple," she said. "I've applied all over town at department stores, offices, the mill."

Now that she has received some money she will continue to look for work, she said.

A Few Facts Before the Axe

Victoria's parks department will go in for wholesale tree felling over the next few months, but wants residents of the three roads affected to know that the removal program is strictly necessary.

Asking for permission to remove 27 trees — 12 from Cornwell, 12 from Burdett and three from Pembroke — parks administrator Cliff Bate told the parks committee today that all the trees are mature and in a dangerous condition.

The large Pissardi trees on Burdett and Cornwell have deteriorating root systems and could "suddenly topple," he said, while the three ash trees on Pembroke have defective branches and are considered "very hazardous."

Bate's statement that information sheets would be distributed to area residents, explaining the program, reassured Ald. Alf Hood who recalled an incident some years ago involving an indignant citizen who "picketed" a threatened tree.

In other business, the committee recommended that the city enter into negotiations for the acquisition of two lots, a 55-acre section at Quadra-Burdett and 85 acres adjacent to Burdett and Vancouver, to be used for park purposes.

Bate suggested the smaller lot could be developed as a "passive park" for senior citizens' use while the other would be suitable for a playlot for younger children.

The latter has some "fine specimens of trees worth $5,000 or $6,000 each," and these might have to be sacrificed if the land were used for some other purpose.

The two lots are tax revenue pieces of property which are proposed as a gift to the city, although the possibility of leasing is also being considered.

VOTERS GET 4 HOURS OFF

Returning officers for two federal ridings in Greater Victoria have announced that polls for the Oct. 30 election will be open between 8 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Regulations allow for each employee to have a clear four hours off work with pay to vote.

Conditional Grants 'Should Die'

Conditional grants to municipalities by the province should have died with the old government, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said Wednesday.

He was commenting on the fact that the Capital Regional District board had taken no action on a recent ad hoc study of ambulance services in the region, and that ambulance services are part of the stipulated use for provincial per capita grants.

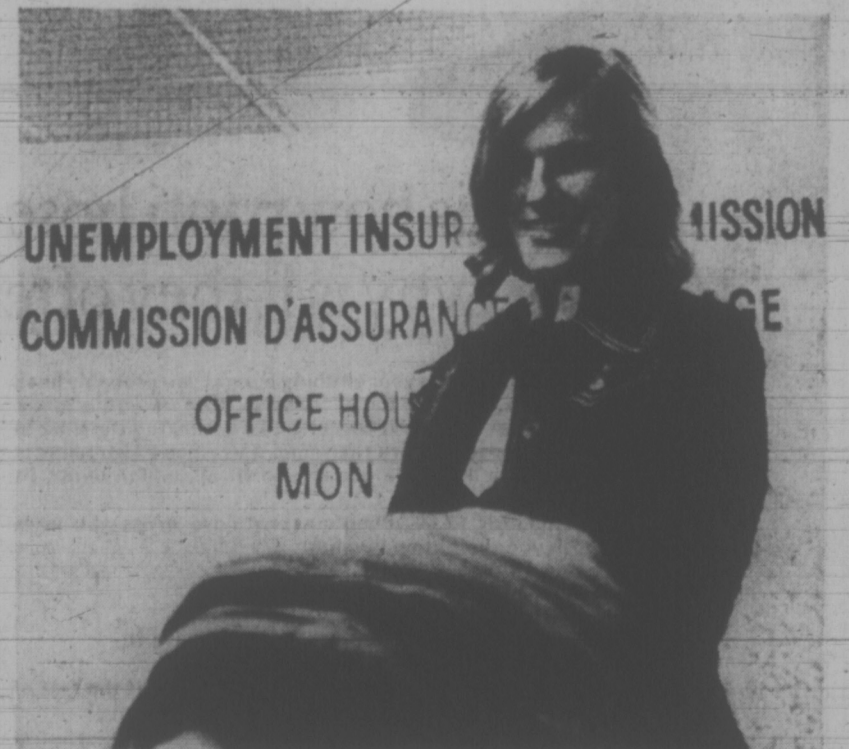

"The region should now determine what the new government will do with respect to cost-sharing arrangements," Curtis said.

"My feeling is that the conditional grant policy should die with the passage of the old government."

Curtis said the needs of individual communities vary so greatly, "it is not possible for a senior government, no matter how sympathetic or careful, to come up with priorities on a province-wide basis."

If municipalities are entitled to grants, within the limits of general guidelines, it should be up to the individual councils to respond to community wishes and identify how money should be spent, he said.

"We reach the final state of foolishness," he said, "when (it is stipulated) $1 each should be applied to additional police services, industrial development and ambulance services."

Who Protects the Retarded?

MONTREAL (CP) — Parents of a mentally retarded individual, especially as they get older, worry about what will happen to the retarded person when they die.

The problem of guardianship and who should take the role — public agencies or private individuals — was a major topic this week at the International Congress on Mental Retardation, attended by delegates from 47 countries.

The assurance that a qualified and authorized personal mentor will be available as needed is at the heart of the guardianship and citizen advocacy problem, said Dr. Elizabeth M. Boggs, a former president of the United States National Association for Retarded Children.

Distress Seen

The Hampton, N.J., "citizen activist," as she called herself, said many countries distrust the public agency as a potential guardian. People complain frequently of the "impersonality" of agencies and want the retarded individual to have a warm and close personal relationship.

Dr. Boggs said that if private guardianship is to be viable, however, the problems associated with the costs of care must be solved. There are, as well, problems associated with supervision of the private guardian to prevent exploitation.

Arrangements for public guardianship with appropriate delegation of responsibility to a qualified individual are being tried in at least six U.S. states, she said.

Paul McLaughlin, a law student from Toronto's Osgoode Hall, said the use of a citizen advocate along with public guardianship can aid in many ways, particularly on the social level. The guardian would be more concerned with legal rights and responsibilities.

Role of Friend

The citizen advocate, a non-paid volunteer who fills the role of friend, adviser and protector for a retarded person, is a relatively new role.

It was also announced to the congress that a new screening test to find infants with hypothyroidism will be started in Quebec this December.

Dr. Claude Laberge of Quebec City, made the announcement about the disease which, unless treated, can cause severe mental retardation.

If hypothyroidism is found and treated early mental retardation can be prevented.

BA Slammed By Prof

TORONTO (CP) — A professor of administrative studies at York University says women should take business courses if they want executive positions.

Speaking during a symposium recently at York University Brian Dixon said only four of 110 students in the master's degree business program are women.

Instead of going for bachelor of arts degrees which Mr. Dixon called unemployment tickets, they should be in business schools or taking courses in engineering.

"There's no way you're going to win an executive place if you get a BA in English literature," he said.

Dr. Laberge said in an interview after an address to the congress.

Hypothyroidism means that the thyroid gland in the neck is not producing enough of a necessary hormone. Thyroid extract can be given by mouth, however, so the treatment is relatively simple.

Unless the newborn infant is treated, however, severe mental retardation and some physical manifestations will appear.

The disorders that can be identified by the present tests are phenylketonuria, commonly called PKU, tyrosinemia and galactosemia. PKU and galactosemia can be treated by special diets.

Dr. Laberge said normal babies usually have a relatively high thyroid count, so the test appears to be a suitable one to find the absence or low amounts of thyroid.

The total costs of the screening tests on the newborns, including the cost of the new thyroid test and another set of tests on urine is "about $1 for each baby," he said.

Cost of caring for a child suffering from PKU, usually in an institution, have been estimated up to $38,000 a year.

Dr. Laberge said if the new test identifies even 10 newborns a year the saving to taxpayers in costs of medical care, special educational facilities, sheltered workshops and so on, "could be $500,000 a year."

Initial capital investment for the new program is fairly expensive, he said. A special machine for doing assay tests on the blood sample costs about $20,000 and initial investment is close to $35,000.

Full Inclusion

The consensus throughout the four-day congress was that the mentally retarded should be included in community activities to the fullest extent of their abilities, but that special facilities, such as special classes, should be available to help them to learn to cope and for the most severely handicapped.

A major aim of the conference has been to develop a plan of action for all countries to try to adopt the declaration of rights for the mentally retarded, passed last December by the United Nations.

The declaration called for all mentally retarded persons to be granted their full rights as citizens, rather than being treated as "perpetual children" or "holy innocents," as speakers at the congress said is a prevailing attitude.

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Herbert Buetow, retired president of the 3M Co., left an estate totalling $11,543,726, it was reported this week by Judge Andrew A. Glenn of Ramsey County probate court. Buetow, who died last Jan. 8 at 73, headed 3M from 1953 until 1963.

'Short-Changed' Indians Learn to Help Themselves

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A feeling by Indian band councils that native children were being "short-changed" on education resulted in "an exciting challenge" for Richard Young.

Mr. Young is an instructor in counselling theory and practice at the University of Western Ontario's Althouse College of Education.

This year, he is assisting nine Indian students in gaining skills to return to their reserves and "help their people attain educational and personal goals."

"One thing we have learned in education is that native people can help native people best, just as blacks can help blacks best and poor people can help poor people best," Mr. Young said in an interview.

"What's particularly important is that this program resulted from the band councils approaching the department of Indian affairs who in turn approached the universities," he said. "It wasn't something that was foisted on them."

The one-year social counselling course for native people was started here last year with 18 students, most of whom upon graduating were hired by local-area Indian bands. Two others accepted positions with the Indian affairs department and two of the graduates remained in London — one with the board of education and the other to work at a boys' home.

This year's students, seven men and two women who range from 23 to 30, are taking such subjects as introductory sociology, health and physical education, guidance and elementary education, remedial reading and Indian culture and history featuring a native lecturer, as well as the counselling course.

Requirements of the program are the same as for university entrance — either successful completion of Grade 13 or a Grade 12 diploma with the student being more than 23 years of age.

Tuition is paid directly to the university by the Indian affairs department. Financial arrangements for books and lodging are made between the department and the individual student.

In addition to his academic studies, the student spends nine weeks in the field, working with counsellors in the various school systems in southwestern Ontario.

While the social counselling course is run in conjunction with the regular program at Althouse College, there is also a steering committee made up of federal officials and members of various Indian bands.

This is how pantyhose should fit, so why is it they often don't?

Because to ease the squeeze on your clothing budget you probably head for bargain pantyhose. But it's fools' paradise. To give you a lower price, the manufacturer has to cut corners. Like not taking the time to make sure both pantyhose legs are the same. And since a size range is expensive to set up, he'll make a one size to fit all, which won't fit anyone too well.

On the other hand, for $2.00, Phantom pantyhose gives you sizes according to both your height and weight...

- Colours that won't fade.
- A choice of fashion details.

Better PR Cure For Police Image

VANCOUVER (CP) — The mutual hostility between Vancouver's youth and the city's police department could be eased by a program of public relations, according to the results of a youth survey.

Six University of British Columbia students, backed by an Opportunities for Youth grant, interviewed 500 young people during the summer on their attitudes toward the police.

They concluded that ignorance of the police officer's role in the community was compounded by the police department's unwillingness to promote understanding.

"Police could participate in school programs set up to inform youth about their role and to increase their own understanding of young people," the surveyors report.

"Contrary to general public and police feeling, not all young people considered police officers to be 'pigs' who are on a continual path of harassment," the report said.

The great majority of those interviewed (84.8 per cent) believed that the policeman's job had become harder in recent years and 84.8 per cent thought the public in general does not give the police sufficient help.

Of the total interviewed, 71.2 per cent claimed to have had at least one unsatisfactory experience with the police.

One reason given for the lack of public support for the police was "their enforcement of currently unpopular legislation, specially the soft drug laws," the report said.

$1.95 Toy Could Save Your Life

A University of Victoria biologist says a child's $1.95 toy could mean the difference between life and death for victims of boating accidents in cold waters.

Dr. John Hayward says his research shows that a plastic inflatable ring, about three feet across, used in conjunction with a regulation life jacket, gives such victims an 800 per cent better chance of survival.

The ring allows the user to raise most of his body out of the water reducing the risk of death from cold water exposure.

Research at UVic has shown that the average person will die of cold exposure after about 1½ hours in local waters. The mean temperature of Vancouver Island waters is 42 degrees F.

Hayward and Drs. Martin Collis and John Eckerson of the physical education department have spent a year and a half researching the effects of hypothermia (low body temperature) on the body and the ways in which the body attempts to maintain a normal temperature when immersed in extremely cold water.

They are now working on a second stage of research aimed at finding out what kinds of life preservers offer the best protection against cold as well as providing adequate flotation.

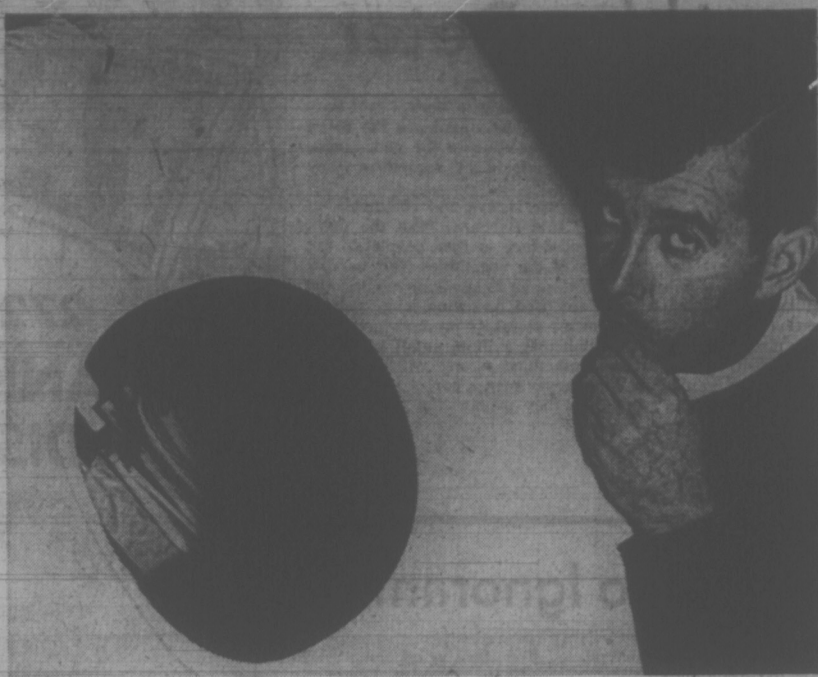

All life jackets tested so far have failed to protect the wearer from the effects of prolonged immersion in cold water.

Hayward says that although boosters are required by law to carry government approved life jackets, such jackets are not tested for thermal protection.

"The life jacket committee of the ministry of transport only tests for face-up flotation and wearability," Hayward says.

"A life jacket in these waters is just something to help rescuers find the body unless they get to you within a couple of hours," the biologist claims.

UVic research has shown that exposure to severe cold affects the heart, causing a change in heart beat. This occurs at different sub-normal body temperatures (the temperature of vital organs like the heart, lungs and brain) depending on the physical resistance of the person tested. Fat people, for example, survive longer than thin.

UVic's Hayward inflates buoyancy ring

The immediate cause of death in hypothermia cases is fibrillation — uncoordinated spasms of the heart muscle.

Volunteers wearing light clothing and a life jacket reach the danger point (when irregular heart beat occurs) after about 1½ hours and have to be taken out of the water.

Hayward said that when he was able to get most of his body out of the water by climbing up on the plastic ring he cooled at one eighth the rate recorded in previous tests.

"Instead of lasting 1½ hours I could have paddled around for 10."

He points out that although government regulations forbid the use of such rings as life preservers, their use in combination with an approved jacket is legal.

Hayward has only done one but believes the result of that ocean test on the plastic ring, one experiment would hold true in all cases.

He believes "this simple, inexpensive expedient" will give people in the water eight times their present chance of survival.

Hayward suggests that boaters fold the deflated ring and attach it to their life jackets. Blowing up the ring takes only 1½ minutes.

Manpower Airs Job Plan For the Disadvantaged

An on-the-job training program for disadvantaged workers will be announced shortly by federal Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey, a Canada Manpower representative said Wednesday.

Under the program, the labor department will help pay wages of the disadvantaged worker throughout his first working contract with his new employer, said F. S. Hatcher, chief of the agency relations section of Manpower's regional headquarters.

Physically handicapped people, Indians and immigrants will be among those helped by the new program, said Hatcher. The federal government is expected to pay all of the worker's first month's salary, and a proportion of his salary from then on, he said.

Hatcher spoke at a seminar on the employment of the handicapped, organized by the Community Council of Greater Victoria and held in the Empress Hotel.

He saw the on-the-job program as a more practical form of help than simply offering skill training programs to the unemployed.

"Can these (skill training) programs solve the unemployment problem by training people for jobs that don't exist?" he asked.

George Bevis, manager of Victoria's Canada Manpower office, said the numbers of disadvantaged people looking for jobs has been climbing in recent years.

"We've got a sick society and it's going to get worse," he told the audience.

the moment to place your job requirements," Bevis told employers in the audience.

"I suggest at the moment it is," he admitted.

Manpower counsellors are unable to deal with these socially handicapped people properly, said Bevis. They haven't the professional skills to assess these people, to pick out which are suited to re-training, which need professional counselling, which are permanently unemployable.

Purpose of Wednesday's seminar, which was financed by the B.C. department of health and hospital insurance, was to "sell" employers on the idea of hiring physically handicapped people.

Eight hundred local employers received invitations but only a fraction of the 107 people who registered for the seminar were employers.

"We are really talking to ourselves," Bevis told the audience. "We're pretty well all representing social agencies, institutions and personnel departments," Bevis said he saw only 15 or 20 employers in the audience.

'Poor Place'

A 1968 survey of over 4000 Manpower clients in Victoria showed that 24 per cent of these clients could not be referred to an employer, said Bevis. They were socially handicapped by their attitude, their past work record, their appearance, lack of education, or alcoholic tendencies, he said.

Another 34 per cent were only partially referable, the survey showed.

"You may suggest that Manpower is a poor place at

Shoe Trend to Saddles Is Step Back in Time

NEW YORK (NYT) — They're back in the saddles again.

After a 15-year hiatus, in which the primary wearers were a few die-hard cheerleaders, people are once again donning those old favorites of the forties and fifties: saddle shoes. Stores are advertising them. Fashion magazines are featuring them.

Woody Allen sports them in his two latest movies. And at least one male fashion model wears them while driving to his bookings in his circa-1950 Cadillac.

"They make me think of how carefree things were back in the nostalgic fifties," said Francis Wood, 29 years old, of Manhattan, a self-described "entrepreneur" who was wearing a pair of brown and white saddle shoes the other day while shopping.

In fact, most fashion experts trace the return of the saddle shoe to the resurgence of interest in the fifties in general, as exemplified by such things as bright lipstick and baggy fashions, the Broadway musical "Grease" and the recent hit movie, "The Last Picture Show."

"We've in a sense returned to the postwar period," said Dorothy Tricarico, consultant in the design laboratory of the Brooklyn Museum.

Fashion Source

"That period has become a fashion source for such things as Sloppy Joe sweaters, plaid skirts and platform shoes. It was just natural that saddle shoes would return, too."

Today's two-toners are a bit jazzier than their old black and white (or brown and white) cousins. The heels are often higher, the toes are often bumper, and the colors now include brown and tan, black and burgundy, and even white on white. Many styles are available in suede.

According to a spokesman for the Thom McAnn Shoe Company, which features saddle shoes in its 50th anniversary "nostalgia collection," 10 per cent of the company's recent back-to-school business was in saddle shoes.

No Exact Figures

"We can't give any exact figures because that's the kind of thing the Kinney people would like to know," he said. "But it was thousands and thousands of shoes."

According to shoe salesmen, the leading saddle shoe customers are not teenagers as was true in the forties and fifties, but post-college career people between the ages of 25 and 40.

"They usually say something like, 'oh, I used to wear them when I was a kid,' said Paul Texler, a salesman at Abercrombie-Fitch, which is stocking saddle shoes for the first time since 1960.

Many saddle shoe fans, after learning that their favorite footwear was back in vogue, merely went into the closet and dusted off a pair they had owned for years.

"They're the most comfortable shoes I've ever worn," said Charles Sawyer, 30, an advertising copywriter in Manhattan, who first wore his black and white pair at the University of Georgia in 1960. Now he wears them mostly on weekends while strolling around the city.

"They're like combat boots," he added. "You can wear them in sleet, rain and snow, and nothing happens to them."

Reducing Salon Fined for Ads

OTTAWA (CP) — Figur Magic, a city weight-reducing salon, has been fined $1,000 under the federal Combines Act on a charge of false advertising, and given a suspended sentence on six other similar charges.

A second part of the judgment handed down this week has been adjourned to Oct. 16.

Judge J. P. Beaulne will give his decision then as to whether federal or provincial authorities should investigate the producers of weight-reducing solutions who claim the application of their product will take off fat.

Figur Magic was charged last spring by the consumer affairs department after clients complained they didn't lose fat as promised in newspaper advertisements.

Medical witnesses testified at the trial that solutions used in the Figur Magic method had no fat reducing powers and that treatment could induce loss of body water and salt through perspiration but no long-term fat loss.

Weight loss involved in the process would be regained in 12 hours of normal eating and drinking, court was told.

The treatments, which cost $22.50 each, involved being wrapped in bandages, zipped into a perspiring suit, covered with electric blankets and then a special cream applied.

'Temperance Tag Has Got to Go'

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — The fundamental principle of the Canadian Women's Christian Temperance Union of total denial of alcohol consumption must be altered if it wants to keep in tune with the times, Premier Alex Campbell said recently.

He told delegates to the union's national convention that "if your main concern is with the use of alcohol and drugs, any hope of achieving measures of social reform is lost by your fundamental requirements of abstinence."

"If you wish your organization to be tuned to the times, to receive popular recognition and general acceptance, I submit that you must first begin by advocating moderation... rather than total abstinence," premier Campbell said.

"I am not suggesting that each of you have to compromise your own personal values and ideals. What I am suggesting is that you need to remold your organization to be in tune with the times."

The premier added: "My first suggestion is that you change the name of your organization. The word temperance has too many associations with the ghosts of the prohibition era to gain popular acceptance particularly with our young people today."

All Candidates To Air Views

Candidates for the Saanich-Esquimalt and Victoria ridings in the Oct. 30 federal election will present their views and answer questions from the audience.

If the no-good panti hose you bought isn't labelled, how can you complain?

Once the package they came in is thrown out, a label in the pantihose becomes very important. So if something's wrong, you've got a name to complain to. You get that advantage with $2.00 Phantom pantihose. Our name is sewn into the back of every pantihose we package. You'll rarely find a name sewn into a cut-rate brand. Mistakes happen to the best of us. The difference is, Phantom wants to know when you're unhappy with their pantihose. That's why we sew in our label, to assure you of our quality. Think of that next time you buy an unlabelled bargain. If it's no-good, who are you going to complain to? We've stood behind our hosiery for 40 years.

If you pay less, expect less.

First Wife Pays Second The Alimony

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The second Mrs. Gerald Glickman has been ordered to pay more than $8,800 in alimony and child support to the first Mrs. Glickman, although neither of them is now married to Glickman.

The unusual court order has its roots in an unusual contract—in which the first Mrs. Glickman agreed to divorce Glickman so there could be a second Mrs. Glickman.

It all came out this week before U.S. Superior Court Judge Thomas C. Tager, who said he believed his ruling in the case was unprecedented in California, and perhaps in the country.

Claire J. Glickman, the first wife, signed a contract in 1967 with the then Mrs. Hilda Collins. Claire agreed to divorce Glickman so that Hilda could marry him, and in turn Hilda entered into an agreement guaranteeing payment of alimony and child support to Claire in 1969.

By that time the payments to Claire were $8,852.80 in arrears.

Glickman, who testified at the subsequent trial that he is a home improvement salesman and "works when he feels like it," was considered "uncollectable."

So Claire sued Hilda. Hilda's attorney tried to get the contract annulled, alleging fraud, duress, menace, undue influence, misrepresentation, collusion, conspiracy and "she signed it without reading it."

Judge Tager said none of those defenses applied and ordered Hilda to pay Claire the money demanded.

Claire's attorney said that represents only part of the money owed, and said another suit will lay claim to some more.

A Smouldering Letter On Filter Failure

Tobacco Company.

Dear Sir:

First of all, I want you to know that I'm not given to petulant complaining.

Just last month in a restaurant, for example, I ate an entire bowl of split pea soup that had a brilliant green horsefly bobbing about in it. (I didn't eat the horsefly, mind you, just kept shoving him aside until he finally got one leg around a crouton and managed to climb out.)

No, until last week I was even-tempered and placid enough to be considered frightfully dull by most everyone. But last week in the supermarket I bought cigarettes. A whole carton of cigarettes. Your brand. And for the past six days, whenever I have smoked one of your cigarettes, the filter has fallen off.

Not all the filters fall off immediately. Occasionally I have been enjoying a second or third puff only to have the wee cardboard end jettison a smouldering payload into my lap.

New Meaning For Crafts

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP)—Beadwork and leathercraft skills of years past took on a new meaning as children from the nearby Fort William Indian reserve gave up part of their summer to participate in a handicraft course sponsored by the department of Indian Affairs.

Teacher Virginia McLaren said the children, ranging in age from five to early teens, won first, second, and third prizes for mukluks and third prize for moccasins at a leathercraft exhibition in Sault Ste. Marie.

Limp Vegetables Deter

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—An organic food venture is going badly here because its operators say housewives "think that a limp, small vegetable must have something wrong with it."

Despite customer reluctance, the youthful managers of the Goodnews, Sunshine, Fruit and Vegetable Co. are determined to make a go of it and their goal is education rather than profits.

Goodnews, which employs seven persons full time, is sponsored by a construction firm as a community service project. The idea is to introduce underprivileged and minority youths to farm work and the wholesale and retail businesses.

Not So Ignorant

DEAR ABBY: My husband (I'll call him Louie) pleases me in every way. He's kind and generous, doesn't drink or chase, and he has been a wonderful father to our children. He has always been a good provider. He owns a small construction business and we have a lovely home, two cars, nice clothes and money in the bank. I have never had to work outside the home, and I do his bookkeeping.

My problem is my relatives. They are always making dirty remarks about how "ignorant" Louie is. (Never to his face.) It's true, Louie can sign his name, but that's about all. As a child he was poor and sickly and he never made it through the third grade.

Please tell me what to say to my relatives who never pass up a chance to tell me how "ignorant" my husband is. (P.S.: When my college educated brother needed a loan, who do you think gave him the money? My "ignorant" husband.)—Satisfied With Louie

DEAR SATISFIED: Try this: "There is a vast difference between an 'ignorant' person and an uneducated one. Louie may be uneducated, but he is far from ignorant. Many educated people are ignorant, and there are many who have had no education who are very intelligent. If Louie's lack of education offends you, why don't you just leave us alone?"

DEAR ABBY: Is there such a thing as a compulsive talker? If so, my wife leads the parade. She talks incessantly from 8 a.m. until 10 p.m. And then she wonders why she's tired all the time.

Isn't it a fact that talking continuously uses up much energy and makes the talker tired?—Stop the Wind

DEAR STOP: In answer to your first question: Yes. There is such a thing as a compulsive talker. And you will usually find them married to people with ulcers, high blood pressure and nervous indigestion. And yes, continuous talking can make one tired.

But not half as tired as those who have to listen to it.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Stumped" struck a responsive chord in me. I, too,

Even though statistics show that our country harbors more than 4,000 active narcotic abusers, nobody knows how many Canadians have succumbed to dependence on non-medical drugs. Many more, especially young people, have been experimenting with such drugs just to know the thrill of feeling "high."

Druggism an 8-page pamphlet, addresses itself to adolescents. It tries to convince them that drugs will not solve any of their personal problems but only impart temporary, deceptive contentment.

It also stresses that taking non-medical drugs is a very dangerous way of coping out because it may destroy their mental and physical health. In addition, the use, possession and sale of most non-medical drugs can lead to arrest and even a fine.

At the end of the booklet is a list of addresses, one in each province, where free educational material on drug abuse and alcoholism is available.

Anesthesia May Dull Defences

BOSTON (AP) — Evidence reported this week suggests that anesthesia may interfere with the body's natural defence mechanisms, possibly making patients more susceptible to infection and the spread of some cancer cells.

The study from the National Institute of Health NIH provides additional evidence to other research which has suggested anesthesia's interference with the body's natural immune system, says Dr. Bruce F. Cullen, assistant professor of anesthesiology at the University of Washington in Seattle.

Dr. Cullen, in a report to the annual meeting of the American Society of Anesthesiologists, emphasized that the NIH study is not definite proof of the theory.

"Although the data suggests this is true," Dr. Cullen said, "the test does not say definitely that anesthesia causes patients to be more susceptible to infection."

The latest study was conducted at the NIH clinical centre in Bethesda, Md., where Dr. Cullen is a member of the anesthesiology department.

Blood was withdrawn from 18 patients before anesthesia and again during anesthesia, but before surgery. The patients were anesthetized with the most commonly used agents, nine patients with halothane and nitrous oxide and nine others with nitrous oxide and intravenous thiopental and Innovar.

Dr. Cullen said Leukocytes, white blood cells which attack foreign objects in the body, were separated from whole blood and tested for their ability to engulf foreign particles, in this case, bits of latex.

The study found that both forms of anesthesia reduced the white cells' ability to engulf the foreign particles.

"This inhibition is significant statistically," Dr. Cullen said, "but we're not sure it works this way in a patient."

"This test was an artificial one, using latex and how it would work with bacteria is another thing."

Dr. Cullen said he is interested also in how anesthesia's effect on immune response could affect the body's defence against cancer.

"There have been studies which show that during cancer surgery tumor cells are released into the circulatory system, and it is thought that the body's immune system destroys them and prevents them from growing elsewhere. If anesthesia interferes, it also could affect this response."

He said more research is needed to find out if the anesthesia itself interferes with immune response, or whether the anesthesia triggers another factor which affects the body's immunology.

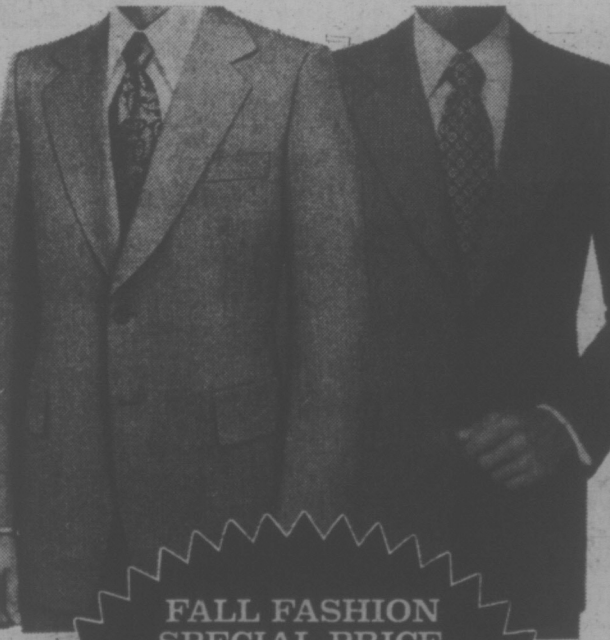

Dr. Cullen stressed that even though anesthesia is known to have bad effects on many parts of the body, it is a now-irreplaceable tool in medicine and has helped millions of patients during surgery.

Star-Struck Tourists Sticky-Fingered

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A million people troop through Universal Studios on tour every year and take away a little bit of the studio with them. Literally.

Hundreds of items are taken from the studio in a quest for souvenirs by tourists. Universal is the only movie studio that operates a tour.

"They'll take anything they suspect a star has touched," said Herb Steinberg, a studio executive. "When Paul Newman had his office on the lot they went around taking beer cans out of the trash."

Rubber rocks on the outdoor sets are a favorite. John Wayne's cowboy hat vanished from the movie museum. Ashtrays, parking signs, name plates—anything with the name of the studio or a star—are targets.

TOOK HITCHCOCK HEAD

Someone took the head off an Alfred Hitchcock dummy used to promote his movie Frenzy.

"I hope the thief went away with it tucked under his arm in the best Anne Boleyn manner," said Hitchcock. "That's the way they used to tell the apocryphal story about how the ghost of Anne Boleyn went about with her head tucked under her arm."

She was the second wife of King Henry VIII, who lost her head on the chopping block.

The studio could call the police. But one day after 500 kids had examined the Adam-12 police car it was discovered the radio and microphone were gone.

One stop on the tour is the Lucille Ball dressing room. So many cans of hair spray and other items on the dressing table vanished that Walker said he asked the girl guides to bring in their empties. Those disappeared, too. Finally, they glued the cans down to the tabletop with epoxy.

Walker still has not figured out how someone made off with a 100-pound statue of Woody Woodpecker that was standing in front of the tour centre. Another item taken was the feet of a gorilla in a jungle set.

The missing item that causes the most amusement was taken from a Western set.

Diamond to Shine on Broadway

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — He will step into the spotlight tonight, standing where Al Jolson once stood alone, and he'll sing songs so unique he can describe them only as "Neil Diamond music."

To millions of fans the description is magic. Diamond compositions—Sweet Caroline, I Am, I Said, Stones, Dome Too Soon, Song Sung Blue, Porcupine Pie and more—have kept him perched at the top of music charts for three years.

The scheduled one-man show at Broadway's Winter Garden Theatre in New York is nearly sold out. And it comes just after a triumphant stand at Hollywood's outdoor Greek Theatre where fans hung from tree-tops to get a glimpse of the 30-year-old superstar.

The Schubert Organization, which is bringing Diamond to Broadway, calls him "an American original" and says it's the first time since Jolson that a pop song star has been showcased alone on Broadway. Jolson appeared at the same theatre in the 1920s and 1930s.

TO TELEVISION SHOW

There will be 20 Diamond performances through Oct. 21, and one show will be beamed by satellite to Europe and Iron Curtain countries.

Diamond, a native of Brooklyn, now lives in Los Angeles with his wife and small son.

"I went through seven years of total failure," he recalls. In an interview, "My average income was $300 per year."

"But it was exciting. I was learning that there was a way in which I could express myself."

His seven years of failure were spent in New York, composing songs on a $30 piano and peddling them to publishers who didn't buy.

Finally, the first breakthrough came. A songwriting-record production team spotted him and offered him his first recording contract. The record, Cherry Cherry backed with Solitary Man, attracted immediate attention. Success had arrived.

Thanksgiving Offers
Chance to Catch Up

The three-day Thanksgiving holiday ahead for many fortunate people will at least ensure home gardeners an opportunity to catch up with things they wanted to do before bad weather.

Assuming that at least one of the three days will bring our normal pleasant fall weather, I suggest that the first attention needed is the checking of planting areas near house walls, and especially if beneath wide eaves.

First the check should be for general healthy appearance of the plants. These are usually shrubs of various kinds, and on hardy borders perhaps ferns. If all seems well, the next check should be for signs of dampness or dryness in the soil.

During summer, you are more than likely to be aware of watering these wall borders thoroughly, but once cooler weather takes over they are easy to forget.

Look below the surface for dampness, six to 10 inches down if there's a space between plants not occupied by roots, using a small garden spade to bring out a little soil to see what it looks like.

You may be surprised at the bone dry condition you find especially if you have relied on sprinklers during summer to take care of a large area of garden at one time. Too often the outer edge of the sprinkler's reach gets only a surface dampening which looks alright to you at the time but soon dries off in warm, moving air.

The wall with a base of concrete or cement also takes in moisture from the soil, as do concrete walks, steps, or retaining walls wherever they occur in the garden.

Just now it is important to see that these borders are supplied with water down to their roots. You rely on the plants to give your home its winter setting, so do the watering thoroughly on two successive days if necessary to reach the root depth.

***

Rhododendrons, camellias and some other broad-leaved shrubs have shallow roots, but most of the conifer types go deeper.

When the water has been slowly applied and has soaked away, a light mulch of partly rotted compost or of damp peatmoss for the acid lovers, will prevent removal of humus by beating winter rains.

Tubs and planters on covered patios and entrance terraces must also be checked. Because they are not in the house it can be forgotten that neither are they out in open soil under the sky.

Give all these permanent plants a slow soaking on two separate days. This ensures the dry soil absorbing sufficient moisture to last about a month. Next time they may need only a full normal watering.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In duplicate bridge, in which game everybody plays the identical deals, when one gets to a game contract on his own steam and goes down, he invariably gets a poor score. The reason is that a few of the other pairs will usually fulfill the same game contract, either by brilliance or by a defender's mistake. And a few others will stop at a part-score contract on the same cards, which they will fulfill, thus obtaining a "plus score."

Thus when one arrives at a game contract that seems doomed to defeat, he goes all out to make the contract, even though the possibility exists that he will be slaughtered if his plan of attack fails. Such was the case in today's deal, which came up in a National Championship event. North-South vulnerable South deals.

Opening lead: Five of ♣.

South's rebid of one no-trump was an inferior call. He should have rebid either two diamonds or two hearts. Had he done so, he probably would have arrived at the far superior contract of four hearts.

When the dummy came into view, South realized that he was doomed to defeat if the opponents could diagnose the existing set-up correctly. His only legitimate chance of fulfilling his contract was if either opponent possessed, specifically, the doubleton Q-J of spades. In this situation, five spade tricks would be made. But South appreciated that the possibility of the precise distribution existing was very slim.

So South grasped for what he thought was his sole hope. He won the opening club lead with dummy's ace, and promptly led the diamond jack. When East played low, South put up his king. When the king won the trick, South made his vulnerable game (for a poor score, as it turned out, since most of the other North-South pairs arrived at a four-heart contract, making eleven tricks).

Of course, if East had been clairvoyant, he would have played his ace of diamonds at trick one, and returned a club. South would then have gone down two tricks. But how could East have known the true situation?

And if it had been West who had possessed the diamond ace, declarer would have gone down three tricks, since in this case the defenders would have made five club tricks and two diamonds. But South had no choice except to live dangerously.

Picket Limits Asked of Court

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Forest Products Ltd. applied in B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday for an injunction to prevent mass picketing at Mackenzie, about 80 miles north of Prince George, where members of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada are on strike against the firm's sawmill.

The application was adjourned to Friday at the request of the union.

The company said in a statement: "The decision to take this action was based on a number of incidents where pickets obstructed persons not directly involved in the labor dispute."

About 300 PPWC members went on strike last week over a contract dispute.

There were reports that rocks and pebbles were thrown at two vehicles crossing the picket line and RCMP said they would make regular patrols of the line.

At one point, a total of 600 men, including employees of other firms in the industrial park where the mill is located, were off the job. All but BCFP operations returned to normal after the other firms agreed no materials would be supplied to the company.

Members of construction unions employed on building a new BCFP pulp mill in the industrial park were off the job Tuesday after officials of the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council met with PPWC officials and agreed not to cross the PPWC picket line.

The PPWC members have turned down a company offer of a wage increase of 87 cents an hour over two years on a base rate of $3.66 and a top rate of $5.17 for sawyers.

Lamuse accepted what he called "minimal conditions" of his Peronist followers there.

IS PHENOMENON A DYING SUN?

TORONTO (CP) — The final explosion of a supernova, a sun at the end of its life, may be occurring in the outer reaches of the universe.

Since the phenomenon has never occurred in the modern era, astronomers cannot be certain whether that is the explanation of mysterious outbursts of electromagnetic radiation from a stellar object in the Constellation Cygnus.

The activity was first detected a month ago by Philip Gregory, a University of Toronto astronomer, who first calculated that the object, called Cygnus X-3, was spewing out radiation 200 times its normal intensity. Later, the figure was revised to nearly 1,000 times normal.

There have been three subsequent outbursts of lesser intensity but even at its lowest ebb, Cygnus X-3 is emitting radiation 100 times greater than its previous norm, said Dr. Gregory.

Hec said astronomers are "beginning to wonder if we'll see something even more cataclysmic than we've seen already."

Actually, no one has yet succeeded in seeing Cygnus X-3 visually but its activities have been measured on astronomical instruments by a world-wide network of observatories.

Dr. Gregory said several papers on Cygnus X-3, including two Canadian ones, will be published this month in the scientific journal Nature.

Liberal Leader Raps Welfare 'Free Riders'

BRANDON (CP) — Manitoba Liberal leader I. H. Asper Wednesday called for implementation of a work-for-welfare program that would eliminate those who are getting "a free ride" from the welfare rolls.

Speaking at a meeting at which the Liberals nominated Terry Penton of Brandon to contest the Brandon East riding in the next provincial election, Asper said the present welfare system needs to be overhauled because those in need aren't getting sufficient assistance while many others abuse the system and take advantage of a free ride.

The provincial leader said the welfare system should be removed from government control and placed in the hands of a citizen agency to cut the bureaucracy and make the system more humane. He said this council could devise methods for providing work to all persons on welfare capable of working.

The manpower division of the labor department should develop a backlog of "genuine meaningful jobs," preferably in the private sector of the economy. He said projects could include terracing river banks to prevent erosion, conducting geological or timber surveys and tree-planting programs.

"It is not acceptable to those of us who believe in building a country that while we still have unbroken land, unexplored and undiscovered minerals and a host of things to do in order to complete the tasks of nation building, that we have a system which encourages people not to work, and in fact destroys their sense of self-importance and honor by paying them not to work."

High Mortality

EDMONTON (CP) — Nine out of 10 restaurants go bankrupt in their first five years of operation, James O'Rourke, president of the Canadian Restaurant Association, said Wednesday. The executive vice-president of a Toronto food services management company, O'Rourke said legislation is necessary if small private restaurants are to exist side-by-side with large commercial ventures. He called for a system of licensing which would include provision for the restaurant operator "to keep up with the times." Those entering the business, he said, should have at least a "modicum of knowledge about hygiene and economics, nomics."

Cardinal Won't Quit
CALGARY (CP) — Harold Cardinal, president of the Indian Association of Alberta, defended Wednesday against the demands last month of seven Southern Alberta tribes that he resign.

The southern chiefs said organization funds had been mishandled and confidence in Cardinal's leadership was lacking.

"... My answer to that is that I was elected by the ballot and by the ballot will I go—not by resolution."

Firm's 'Own Fault'
REGINA (CP) — Problems being encountered by Central Canada potash Co. Ltd. in having to curtail production by 50 per cent were brought on by the company's own doing, Premier Allan Blakeney said Wednesday.

Blakeney said the company had felt it didn't get an appropriate allocation under the province's pro-ratation system and had proceeded to produce "pretty well flat out." Now the company, which had been unsuccessful in its challenge of the pro-ratation system in the courts, has to bring its production into line with other potash producers in Saskatchewan.

N.Y. Blast Sparks Fire

NEW YORK (AP) — An explosion ripped through the upper floors of a factory in Brooklyn Wednesday, setting a fire that spread rapidly to surrounding tenements, police reported.

At least 12 persons were injured, including two police officers whose patrol car was struck by debris from the explosion. Others were feared trapped in the flames.

The blast destroyed the two upper floors of the factory, hurling girders into the street. One girder tore a hole in the side of a bus stopped on the street but no one was reported injured.

Equality of Prostitution Asked

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — The Indian Brotherhood of the Northwest Territories has submitted a bitterly sarcastic brief to the territorial government to parody the idea of legalized prostitution in the North.

The paper, aiming to condemn the idea through satirical praise is designed to "expose the idiocy of the whole exercise," says a spokesman for the brotherhood.

Part of the paper says: "The government of Canada had been prostituting this country to the Americans for years. Why should the native people not be given the opportunity to participate? They could then say at last that they were enjoying the full rights of Canadian citizenship."

The territorial council last summer asked for a report on the feasibility of licensing prostitutes. Tom Butters, elected member for Western Arctic, said the plan could be a method for controlling the soaring venereal disease rate in the North.

The Indian brief says that typically in history, prostitution has been motivated by economic reasons and prostitutes and their protectors came from the ranks of the economically disadvantaged.

"It can be said that the merits of legalizing prostitution in the N.W.T. are obvious."

"Since the native people are the most disadvantaged in the N.W.T. from the economic viewpoint, and since the business of prostitution draws upon the ranks of disadvantaged, prostitution must be developed for the advantage of the native people."

The brief says that under federal guidelines northern development must have as a first priority the welfare of the native people. Legalized prostitution, therefore, was the opportunity the government has been looking for.

"If oil companies are going to import 5,000 pipeline workers, surely they must be told to hold the line. "Under no circumstances must they be allowed to import prostitutes from the south, thereby taking away traditional job opportunities from native people."

The sarcastic brotherhood paper recalled Jonathan Swift's satirical A Modest Proposal, which recommended the consumption of babies as a solution to Irish famines.

The brotherhood recommended a three-point plan of action, starting with the establishment of a department of prostitution in the territorial government.

An alternative would be a prostitution control board with terms of reference similar to provincial liquor control boards.

Mocking the territorial government's concern over the federal presence in the North and northern autonomy, the brotherhood says it would give all necessary assistance to the territorial government "to ensure that this valuable resource is not taken over by the federal government."

It goes on to call for training courses in prostitution at adult vocational colleges.

"The department of industry and development should make available large sums of money to native entrepreneurs through the small business loan fund to set up native-owned-and-operated houses of prostitution."

A brotherhood spokesman said there has been no response to the paper from the territorial government.

A government report of the feasibility of licensing prostitutes is expected to be tabled during a special session of the territorial council that starts Oct. 10 at Frobisher Bay.

LIBERAL MINORITY PREDICTED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The head of the Western Canada Party predicted Wednesday that a minority Liberal or NDP government will be the upshot of the Oct. 30 federal election.

Douglas Ligertwood of Winnipeg, WCP president and acting leader of the party, said in an interview that his own party will make no major gains, mainly because it can't afford to run any more than a dozen candidates.

He ruled out the Conservatives as a possible alternative to the Liberal government because under Leader Robert Stanfield the Tories "just aren't going over."

He predicted that the WCP would win two seats in British Columbia, where it has five candidates, all in the Vancouver area, and two more elsewhere in the West.

The Western Canada Party favors making English the official language of the four western provinces and introduction of profit-sharing between employees and employer to wipe out labor-management disputes, he said.

WEST FIREMEN MEET

Representatives from the eight largest fire departments in the west began a three-day informal meeting at the Red Lion Motor Inn Wednesday.

The annual Western Canadian Firefighters Conference aims at formulating broad policies which will benefit firemen, said Fred "Whitey" Severson, president of the Victoria Firefighters Union.

On hand are representatives from the Winnipeg, Edmonton, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Vancouver, Burnaby and Victoria departments as well as regional and provincial officers.

Severson said the meeting does not set policy but reviews everything from union contract details to occupational hazards with a view to developing solutions to problems. About 26 firemen are taking part.

Compensation Awarded For Criminal Injuries

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gerald Killik, 21, of New Westminster will receive $1,604.93 under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act of B.C. Attorney-General Alex Macdonald announced Wednesday.

The award covers financial loss and general damages suffered by Killik after he was assaulted in Penticton July 8, receiving facial lacerations, a broken nose and damage to his teeth.

Also announced was an award of $237.34 to Robert Yorke, 26, of Vancouver, who was attacked, beaten and robbed in Stanley Park July 2.

Macdonald said society has a duty to ensure persons injured as a result of crime do not suffer financial loss or hardship with compensation.

Bribery Charged

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Joginder Singh Gill, 25, a recent immigrant, Wednesday was ordered to stand trial on charges of attempting to bribe an immigration official.

The Crown alleges Gill offered $1,000 to an immigration officer last March to help obtain landed immigrant status for his brother and offered another $1,000 for each person from India admitted to Canada through Prince George.

American Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bail of $15,000 was set Wednesday when Horace Wright, 25, of Philadelphia, appeared in provincial court charged with trafficking in hashish. Police seized 10 pounds of hash after a wild car chase Tuesday through the city's west end. Four other persons were also charged with drug trafficking following a raid on a house in the area. Fifteen bags of marijuana, some cocaine and hashish and $1,700 in cash were found.

Closure Extended

PORT MOODY (CP) — Shutdown of Cascade Electronics Ltd. has been extended three months from Oct. 31 to allow its 170 employees more time to find other jobs. The company manufactures cablevision equipment. The owners said it was barely breaking even and decided to close it.

POISON LETTER-BOMBS

ROME (Reuter) — A deadly poison used by South American Indians to poison arrows was mixed with explosives contained in a letter-bomb received Wednesday by a Jewish organization in Rome, police said today.

The envelope bore Malaysian stamps and a Penang postmark and contained a Black September visiting card.

It was received by the Rome branch of a world-wide organization for helping persecuted Jews which noticed that the letter had not been marked by the Rome post office — normal procedure for mail arriving from abroad.

Police bomb disposal experts said that the explosive was impregnated with curare, a South American poison which causes quick death by paralysing the motor nerves.

If the bomb had gone off, the poison could have entered the wounds of the victim and made death certain, police said.

New Cong Peace Offer: Communists in Cabinet

Times News Services

PARIS — The Viet Cong said today it is ready to discuss "concrete" guarantees not to seize power in South Vietnam if the United States agrees to the creation of a new cabinet in Saigon with a minority Communist participation.

The offer was made by Mme. Nguyen Thi Binh, the Viet Cong foreign minister and chief negotiator, at today's 162nd Vietnam conference session.

The offer was backed by a warning by both Madame Binh and Hanoi delegate Xuan Thuy that peace will come only if South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu is removed from power and replaced by a new tripartite coalition cabinet.

The 46-year-old Viet Cong woman politician said the United States was distorting the picture when it claimed the Viet Cong sought to seize control of the new cabinet it wants to form with the Saigon administration minus Thieu and neutral elements.

She said the Viet Cong already had offered to reach an agreement with Washington that South Vietnam would be dominated by "neither a Communist regime nor a U.S. puppet regime."

"We are also prepared to work out, together with other parties, concrete measures to implement this agreement," she said.

Agence France-Presse reports from Hanoi that an atmosphere of "cautious expectation" exists there concerning the chances of a negotiated settlement to the conflict, although the next move is seen as the Americans'.

"The provisional revolutionary government and Hanoi have drawn up proposals which will allow the two parties not to lose face, and now it's the Americans' turn to make their play," turning to government sources.

The feeling of being virtually on the edge of a cease-fire, barring any accidents due to the stubbornness or the mis-handling of the situation by one of the parties involved, is shared by many observers here.

Failure to grasp the opportunity now presenting itself would, in all probability, mean that the chance would not be available again for another four years — the length of the presidential mandate in the United States.

In Washington today President Nixon ruled out any halt to the bombing of North Vietnam before the Nov. 7 election, saying former President Lyndon B. Johnson made a "very, very great mistake" when he did so just before the 1968 election.

BENNETT NAMES RICHTER

Opposition leader Bennett has named veteran Social Credit minister Frank Richter as house leader for this month's special session of the legislature.

Bennett made the appointment Wednesday by telegram from Padua, Italy, where he is vacationing.

However, Speaker-designate Gordon Dowding said today Richter's apparent appointment cannot be made formal until the opening day of the session.

Richter himself said he expects no problems about his appointment and added that the other eight remaining Social Credit members have been advised.

Barrett Urges Cutbacks In Hydro Use

The NDP government wants British Columbians to use less electricity in order to conserve the province's energy resources.

Both Premier Barrett and Resources Minister Bob Williams said today the government is concerned with the amount of energy being consumed in B.C.

Asked by reporters if he has ordered B.C. Hydro to stop advertising promoting use of electricity, Barrett said he had not but that he "expressed the wish that we want to redirect the advertising."

"We don't want people to be wasteful of that wonderful energy resource," Barrett said. "We want people to cut down on the use of electricity."

The premier said his government "just doesn't believe that galloping electricity consumption is something that should be encouraged. We want every citizen in the province to become involved in conserving energy."

In response to a question Barrett said he would favor having the lights turned off on the B.C. Hydro building in downtown Vancouver "if that means conserving energy in peak periods."

He added that he would also favor a curtailment of light use at the Legislative buildings, except during the tourist season.

Barrett also took a swing at electrical appliance manufacturers who he said are producing appliances that consume far too much electricity.

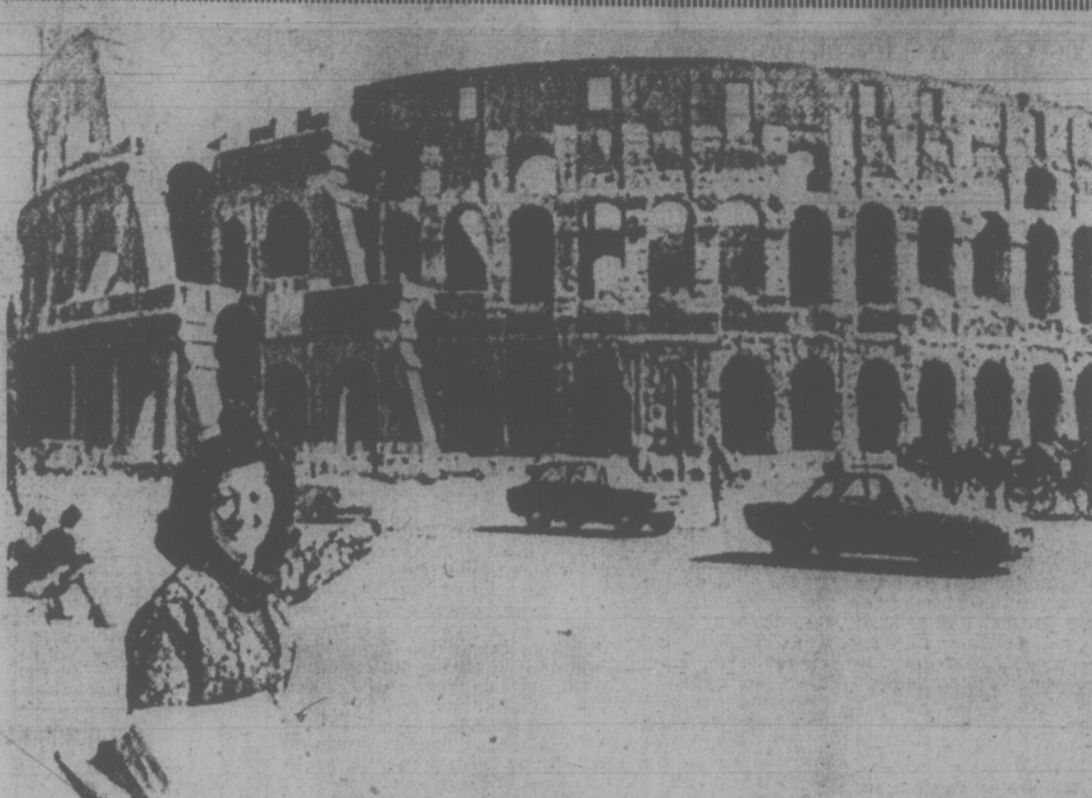

"Let us, small population as we are here in B.C. tell these manufacturers back east and elsewhere that we are going to lead the way in wanting more sensible standards in electricity consumption."

"There is a general concern by the government regarding the incredible demand pattern that exists in B.C. and which is a problem all over North America," Williams said.

"We are convinced that a study on a major scale in terms of working toward curbing demands for energy is something which we should get under way as soon as possible."

Williams said he will be releasing a policy statement on the issue of energy and the role of B.C. Hydro "within a matter of days."

Asked if there will be recommendations regarding Hydro directorships Williams said "it will be a comprehensive statement."

Broker Fausta Vitali and 1,892-year-old 'real estate'

They're Vying for the Colosseum

PESCARA, Italy (UPI) — Thomas Merrick has found competition.

Italian hotel owner Antonio Zinzi wants to buy the 1,892-year-old Colosseum, too. And he says his terms are better.

"If they take his offer seriously, why shouldn't they consider mine?" Zinzi asked after announcing his bid to the press. "After all, I'm offering three times as much."

Zinzi, 42, entered the Colosseum race after Merrick, a Los Angeles industrialist, announced he was willing to buy the crumbling Roman arena for $1 million, restore it and reopen it to the public for a fee. Miss Fausta Vitali, a real estate agent from Laguna Beach, Calif., arrived in Rome Wednesday to contact city officials in Merrick's behalf.

Zinzi said he could not raise as much cash as Merrick. All he could pay right away, he said, was $100,000, but he was ready to throw his hotel in nearby Monteflavio into the deal. And that, he said, is worth $2.58 million and could be used as a school or for poor children's vacations.

"I will charge admission too, but only to foreigners," he said. "Italians can get in free."

METEORS SHOWER DISTRESS SIGNALS

LONDON (Reuter) — Meteors caused confusion in the North Sea during the night when ships' captains mistook them for distress flares.

Coast guards along the east coast of England reported a flood of emergency calls from shipping. Some vessels were even reported to have started searching for ships in trouble.

A coast guard spokesman said today: "For a time there was considerable confusion among shipping. One coast guard station got calls from four ships. But the stations conferred and decided it must have been a meteor shower."

Cargo To Be Seized

PARIS (Reuter) — The giant American Braden Kennecott Copper Corp., whose Chilean assets have been nationalized, has won a French court order permitting temporary seizure of a cargo of Chilean copper, informed sources announced Wednesday.

The freighter is due at Le Havre on Oct. 14, although it was an open question whether it would put in there now.

The American company partly owned the El Teniente copper mine from which the disputed shipment was extracted. El Teniente and the rest of Chile's "big five" mines were nationalized by President Salvador Allende's government 15 months ago.

The copper is destined for the French metal importing agency, which handles 75 per cent of French copper imports, an agency spokesman said.

Payment for the copper to the Chilean Copper Corp. — Codelco — is blocked during the court proceedings.

PM 'Ducks Issue'

Times News Services

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield, in an unusually strong personal attack, accused Prime Minister Trudeau Wednesday of evading responsibility for the policies of his government.

In a frequently-applauded address to an overflow crowd in Edmonton's 2,750-seat Jubilee Auditorium, Stanfield roasted both Trudeau and Manpower Minister Bryce Mackasey for the "scandalous" condition of the unemployment insurance fund.

"The prime minister remains ever anxious to avoid discussing any matter of consequence, ever willing to shift the responsibility to his colleagues, ever reluctant to accept the burden of collective responsibility for the consequences of his own policies or lack of them."

"When a victorious hockey team returns to Canada, our prime minister is there to bask in the reflected glory of a Canadian achievement. Whenever he is asked to defend his policy or to explain his programs, he is out to lunch."

His words heavy with sarcasm, the leader of the opposition also twitted Trudeau over the prime minister's earlier promise of a leisure-activities program.

The prime minister has said that the program, when an-

SUGAR BUNS KILL 2 TOTS

CATANIA, Sicily (Reuter) — Two children died and about 80 persons were in hospital today after eating sugar buns bought in a bakery in the east Sicilian town of Acireale.

The public prosecutor issued an arrest warrant for multiple manslaughter against a husband and wife who run the bakery.

DRUG RAID in Rio de Janeiro netted $60 million worth of pure heroin which agents, acting on a tip, found in five bags aboard a New York-bound freighter. The seizure, largest ever in Brazilian history, weighed 132 pounds.

U.S. Faces Mineral Supply Crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — A scientific group says the United States faces a disastrous mineral-supply crisis "within decades" unless it begins shifting its industrial base to plentiful domestic materials.

The report Wednesday to the national commission on materials policy was another warning that growth — both in population and material production — must come to a halt soon.

The group drawn from the National Research Council concluded "there can be no effective national or international materials policy" without considering population, per-capita demand and environmental impacts.

It said the "demand" side of the supply-demand equation has been largely ignored although "the numbers of humans occupying the earth must be limited to numbers it can comfortably sustain, and their individual consumptions of materials must be kept within supportable limits."

The report said the U.S. already is heavily dependent on foreign raw materials which will be increasingly depleted or withheld as underdeveloped nations industrialize and compete for their use.

Unless the U.S. begins soon to shift its economic base to materials plentiful at home, the report warned, "one can foresee, within decades, the erosion of mining, smelting, refining and mineral-based manufacturing industries, growing economic colonialism, international frictions, a steadily deteriorating balance of trade, and a tarnished global image of the nation."

It said government policy should be to convert the economy gradually into a stable, no-growth condition that can sustain itself indefinitely.

Thus, in milder terms, the U.S. group aligned itself with the general thrust of the Club of Rome report and British scientists' Blueprint for Survival, both published last January.

The Club of Rome, a group of international scientists and economists, predicted the collapse of modern industrial society, perhaps within a century, unless population growth and material consum-

tion are stabilized within the next few decades.

The U.S. national commission on materials policy was appointed in 1971 with the mission of recommending a national materials policy to the president and Congress by June 30, 1973.

The commission gave an interim report in April identifying at least 36 issues in the area of materials-supply problems, but noted the list might be incomplete.

It contracted with the National Research Council for another study of issues.

That study, now published, said, "There was but small support in the group for the view that market forces alone will solve the foreseeable problems."

It said appropriate governmental incentives and controls should be applied to increase production to meet the needs of unavoidable population growth, but at the same time convert the economy in the long run to a no-growth stability.

Attempts to increase U.S. production of minerals, it said, would mean producing "ever-larger quantities of metals obtained from ever-larger investments of energy."

"Conservation measures are needed, not only to stretch our resources but to restore, protect, and perpetuate a livable human habitat."

"We believe that planned adjustment of technology to available domestic resources is essential," it said.

Pension Plan Waits Workers' Voice at UVic Supported Word From Ottawa

B.C. wants to hear by Oct. 17 the federal government's position on the NDP government's proposal to institute a $200 monthly income for old age pensioners, Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi said Wednesday.

Levi had just emerged from a 30-minute meeting with Norman Cragg, director-general of the Canada Assistance Plan, and several other federal officials.

Levi said Ottawa is going to have to make "some adjustments" in the Canada Assistance Plan and that he wants a written statement from federal Welfare Minister John Munro, spelling out Ottawa's participation in the program in time for the special session of the B.C. legislature opening Oct. 17.

"I want to be able, when I am in the house to introduce the bill, to tell the people of British Columbia that the position of the federal government is going to be with respect to our $200-a-month guaranteed income plan," Levi told reporters after the meeting.

He said that even if a special meeting of the federal cabinet is required during the election campaign, "whatever is required for them to make the adjustments, I hope they will accommodate us."

After his meeting with Levi, Cragg, who is assistant deputy minister of the department of national health and welfare, said some aspects of the B.C. proposal meet the guidelines of the Canada Assistance Plan, and some do not.

"So what we have to do now is examine them in greater detail to determine to what extent they do meet the conditions and if they don't, what steps need to be taken," Cragg said.

He said there will likely be further ministerial discussions between Victoria and Ottawa. The NDP government wants to raise the guaranteed income supplement portion of the pension, which applies to about 110,000 persons in the province.

The supplement now stands at $41.10 per month and goes on top of the basic pension of $150 per month to make a maximum of $191.10 per month. The NDP government wants to increase the total to $200 per month.

However, the supplement is shareable between federal and provincial governments, under the terms of the Canada Assistance Plan.

So unless agreement is reached between the two governments, B.C. would potentially have to pay the entire difference itself.

Projected total cost of the move is estimated at $45 million for one year. B.C.'s share of that cost is put at $25 million, if Ottawa comes up with its approximate 50 per cent share.

Premier Barrett says he wants to see the first increases going out to pensioners by Christmas.

The legislation would have to be passed at the forthcoming special session.

Levi said it is now up to the federal government to outline, before Oct. 17, where it stands on the proposal.

Victoria Labor Council Wednesday night endorsed a bid by the Canadian Union of Public Employees for a voice in the administration of the University of Victoria.

CUPE Local 951, representing about 350 workers in office and laboratory classifications, early in September approached university authorities asking for representation on the decision-making body at UVic.

Their bid for a voice in UVic administration — a seat in the senate — they said was not made on the basis of their qualification as academicians. It was made, rather, because of their vested interests.

Many of them, a letter from the CUPE executive to UVic president Dr. Hugh Farquhar said, either have offspring in the university system at present or offspring who will in the near future be entering some university.

The motion to support the CUPE bid, moved by city CUPE member Lew Eckford, a member of Victoria's city hall public employees' union, was supported by the council even after Secretary Larry Ryan pointed out the local in question is not a member of the council.

"The only rider on that (Labor Council support) would be that we would hope the union would come into the council," Ryan said after the meeting.

Ryan told council members he has contacted the CUPE local in question about membership, but got no response.

Speaking to his motion, Eckford told the council the CUPE bid for a voice in university administration is valid because "the university couldn't function without supporting personnel (from CUPE Local 951)."

He said the Victoria Labor Council was morally obligated to support the bid because it "is a significant move on the part of labor" toward a fair voice in the control of society. When the issue went to a vote, there were no dissensions.

Members also approved a resolution for presentation to this year's meeting of the British Columbia Federation of Labor, attacking the British North America Act for advancing apartheid.

It said the BNA act's reference to Indians is "an affront to the human rights principle of equality." It urged the provincial government to seek "entrenchment of the fundamental rights of all Canadians, Indian and non-Indian alike, in the Constitution of Canada."

CRIME CONTROL SHIFT SEEN

Scientists arose who tried to understand the situation, rather than decide who was right.

For a while it looked as though law was moving into the medical field, he said, quoting figures to show that while the population of Norway rocketed during the last 100 years, the number of judges per capita dropped, and the medical profession burgeoned.

"But it may be that we've come to a point of change," Christie said. "The professionals have educated themselves out of their professional attitude" and there is a return to confrontation with moral issues.

In recent research on differences between forms of punishment and the extent to which criminals return to crime, he said, "it is hard to find a study which shows any form of sanction to be better than another."

Christie predicted that a new emphasis on what actually constitutes a crime, rather than treating criminals, would reveal new areas of crime "which are not currently seen in our societies."

He mentioned war-making, corruption in high places, and "white collar crime."

The judicial system had hitherto taken the "easy way out" of confronting the new problems of gigantism in industrialized societies, he said, by picking on the "easy to hit" conventional criminal core of "young, urban, low-status males."

"Compare this approach with the new fundamental problems of size, specialization and segmentation, all of which create new problems for social control," he said. "For example, who is going to police the police?"

A new, unrecognized dilemma for crime control, Christie said, is that "to control large and powerful units you tend to be large and powerful, but in doing so you tend to encourage growth and the original problems."

Dr. Christie has acted as consultant for a number of Scandinavian governments. His address was the first of four in a UVic department of anthropology and sociology "distinguished visitors seminar series."

BOARD TO APPEAL

Greater Victoria school board will appeal the reinstatement of two tenured teachers by the first board of reference set up under new provincial legislation.

Board chairman Allan McKinnon announced the decision Wednesday following a closed board meeting. The appeal will be heard by the B.C. Court of Appeal.

The teachers said they had been suffering from severe the school board July 15 after they had been absent from teaching duties for nine months, McKinnon said.

Dental Plan Under Study Says Cocke

Health Minister Dennis Cocke said today the province is actively considering bringing dental care under the provisions of the B.C. Medical Plan.

Cocke said this morning discussions have been held between him and B.C. College Dentists' president Dr. Douglas McDougall.

He said the matter is "under study" but that the government "is certainly not going to move too quickly into anything that we just can't handle."

He said considerably more planning will have to go into the idea before action can be taken and added that no legislation has been scheduled for the near future.

"There is a realistic possibility that the delivery of dental care will be changed to some degree in the future," CHARGES

"There is a realistic possibility that the delivery of dental care will be changed to some degree 'in the future,'" Cocke told reporters before this morning's cabinet meeting.

He said the province is looking at dental care operations in Saskatchewan and in New Zealand with an eye toward adapting these systems for use in B.C.

"We are taking a look at these other ways. We're not going to jump into things."

SCHOOL VOTE ASKED

A new high school and additions to nearly all inner zone elementary schools in the Colwood-Langford-Metchosin area are proposed by Sooke School District for a December referendum.

Approval of the new provincial government is being sought for a $2.95 million referendum to be placed before ratepayers in municipal elections Dec. 9.

District superintendent E. E. Hyndman said population growth in the area had produced a growth rate at the secondary level of more than 10 per cent annually. By 1981 it is estimated 30,530 persons will live in the inner zone, compared with 13,717 in 1961.

***

A Junior high school is projected for the northeastern part of the area, likely north of Trans-Canada Highway near Millstream or Goldstream.

Elizabeth Fisher Junior and Belmont Senior secondary complex on Jacklin Road has an enrolment of 1,500 pupils today and in four years will have more than 2,600 Hyndman said.

Such growth makes for an unwieldy teaching situation, he said.

Belmont had grown faster than the junior high in the past six years, a total of 95 per cent.

Most of the $2.95 million program will be spent on secondary facilities, in a ratio of 3-1 to elementary construction.

It is proposed to add classrooms, library and activity centre, washroom facilities and other expansion at such schools as Langford, Happy Valley, Savary, Metchosin, Colwood and Sangster, with improvements at Saanichton and Edward Milne.

Comments Coming On Rents

Premier Barrett said today the government will have "some comments to make" on the subject of rents when legislation on old age pensions is introduced in this month's special session of the legislature.

Barrett was commenting on a letter from the B.C. Tenants' Organization which requested that the NDP government impose a rent freeze in order to protect pension increases coming to B.C. elderly citizens.

The premier acknowledged that the provincial government has the right to freeze rents but did not indicate that legislation freezing rents in the province will be forthcoming in the special session.

"When the legislation is introduced there will be comments made," was all he had to say.

Carlos Closes

Wednesday

Carlos Almeida's Mayfair barber shop was closed Wednesday after the firm was acquitted on a recent charge of contravening a municipal bylaw by remaining open on a Monday.

Almeida discovered the firm is subject to another bylaw which obligates him to close Wednesdays.

The company was charged by Victoria Barber's Union secretary Len Stephenson under a 1958 bylaw which stipulates barber shops must close on Wednesdays.

But the firm was charged with opening Monday, July 10, which comes under a 1964 optional closing day bylaw.

Judge Harold Alder ruled that unless formal application is made to operate under the 1964 optional closing day bylaw, the proprietors are automatically subject to the 1958 bylaw.

Stephenson said after the trial he would lay a new charge if the shop had been open Wednesday.

Almeida said he plans to close Wednesdays at least until December.

Press Supporting 'Cultural Genocide'

The press was accused Wednesday night of being party to the cultural genocide of Canada.

Donald Munro, Progressive Conservative candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich, speaking at an all-candidates meeting in Camosun College, accused the media of being irresponsible.

"On the weekend," he said, "I examined Victoria's two daily newspapers. The Saturday afternoon paper carried 10 different stories out of 14 on the front page that had originated outside of Canada. The bulk of these 10 stories were from the United States."

He said the same applied to the Sunday morning paper.

He told one meeting, called by one Victoria chapter of the committee for an Independent Canada he stands for incentives to business, strengthening of export trade, the merchant marine and more investment by Canadians in their own inheritance.

Louis Lindholm, Liberal candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich and Flemming Hansen, New Democratic Party candidate for Victoria differed over the policy of governing foreign investment in Canada.

Hansen contended that all new foreign investment should be 51 per cent controlled in Canada. He said that 70 per cent of Canada's economy was controlled from the outside.

Both he and Roger Smith, NDP candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich, said Canadians should be prepared to tighten their belts if it allowed them to win back control of their affairs.

Lindholm said that control of foreign investments had to be approached in a gradual program otherwise massive unemployment would result.

He described the takeover proposals of NDP politicians as "irresponsible."

He stressed that control — not ownership — of foreign interests in Canada was vital. He, too, stressed that Canada's merchant marine should be strengthened so that Canadian goods could be exported in "Canadian bottoms."

Allan McInnon, PC candidate for Victoria, arriving late at the meeting which about 75 attended, said all foreign companies in Canada should have at least three Canadians serving on their boards.

He added that these companies should be required to give a true accounting of their costs and profits, particularly the costs of borrowing money.

John Tisdalle, Social Credit candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich, quipped about Prime Minister Trudeau's 1968 campaign promises:

"Trudeau, in 1968, said he would promise nothing to B.C. — and he's kept that promise."

Both he and Cliff Stretch, SC candidate for Victoria, said the Bank of Canada should be used to extend loans to Canadians, the same way as it does to newly emerging countries.

Dan Heffernan, Independent candidate for the Victoria riding, said that less than seven per cent of Canadians could afford to own their own homes.

He advocated that all mortgage payments should be made tax-deductible, and called for more federal grants for housing.

Heffernan also said that "all tax cuts should be taken away from industries who don't meet pollution standards."

three from Pembroke — parks administrator Cliff Bate told the parks committee today that all the trees are mature and in a dangerous condition.

The large Pissardi trees on Burdett and Cornwall have deteriorating root systems and could "suddenly topple," he said, while the three ash trees on Pembroke have defective branches and are considered "very hazardous."

Bate's statement that information sheets would be distributed to area residents, explaining the program, reassured Ald. Alf Hood who recalled an incident some years ago involving an indignant citizen who "picketed" a threatened tree.

In other business, the committee recommended that the city enter into negotiations for the acquisition of two lots, a 55-acre section at Quadra-Burdett and .85 acres adjacent to Burdett and Vancouver, to be used for park purposes.

Bate suggested the smaller lot could be developed as a "passive park" for senior citizens' use while the other would be suitable for a playlot for younger children.

The later has some "fine specimens" of trees worth $5,000 or $6,000 each, and these might have to be sacrificed if the land were used for some other purpose.

The two lots are tax revenue pieces of property which are proposed as a gift to the city, although the possibility of leasing is also being considered.

VOTERS GET 4 HOURS OFF

WITNESSES SOUGHT IN STORE ROBBERY

Colwood RCMP have requested assistance from anyone who may have seen anything suspicious at the scene of a $12,000 robbery at Colwood Shop Easy between 9 p.m. and midnight Monday, Staff Sgt. Lloyd Smith said today.

He said the robbery may have occurred at that time because it's the only time the store is empty.

RCMP have interviewed "about 20 employees, former employees and independent people" so far but have made no progress, said Smith.

More Cafes Face Shutdown

Greater Victoria's senior public health officer said today three or four more restaurants are under consideration for closure because they are not meeting cleanliness standards.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread also revealed a farmers' market had been shut down recently because it did not have proper facilities for the prepared food it was selling. He declined to name the establishment.

A week ago Whitbread said four restaurants had been shut down because health inspectors found unsanitary conditions. They were able to re-open within 24 hours after cleaning up.

Today he said the crackdown on sloppy housekeeping by all establishments handling food will continue.

"I don't think one can be lenient when it comes to poor sloppy housekeeping in the kitchens of restaurants or in the rest of the restaurant."

Bakeries, butcher stores and supermarkets will all be involved in the tougher inspection program, he said. The health inspection staff will check out promptly any complaints coming to it.

There are 11 health inspectors operating through the metro health board's jurisdiction, Whitbread said. It's hoped that all establishments handling food could be checked every two to four months. Inspections are undertaken on a no prior notice basis.

Short Siege at UIC Brings Fast Results

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

For three months, 22-year-old Barbara Burghardt battled to get her unemployment insurance payments. On Monday her patience worn out and car loan payments mounting, she took her sleeping bag to the Unemployment Insurance Commission offices all set for a long siege.

A call to the Times brought a photographer and a reporter to investigate. On Wednesday Miss Burghardt, 544 Mount View, received seven cheques in the mail—two more than she was owed.

"I'm very happy," she said. "I've made the payment on my car (a two-year-old Dodge Dart) and I've got $100 in the bank for the next one."

***

"I visited the UIC offices 12 or 13 times trying to get my cheques, which they admitted were owed me since July 9. I only got action after calling the Times and arriving with my bedroll."

Miss Burghardt worked as a teacher's aide for retarded children with Sooke School Board for four years. She said she was not rehired for this year because she could no longer accept differences with the school principal.

She paid unemployment insurance throughout her period of employment, she said.

"The unemployment office just kept saying they would contact Vancouver for the money they said I was owed."

***

The two extra cheques she received on Wednesday were duplicates of others that came in the mail, Miss Burghardt said. She intends to return them.

"There's just no work to be had—it's that simple," she said. "I've applied all over town at department stores, offices, the mill."

Now that she has received some money she will continue to look for work, she said.

A UIC spokesman blamed the delay on the central office in Vancouver which makes out cheques for Victoria. Within one hour of Miss Burghardt's arrival at the 380 Douglas office the spokesman said he had her payments "all squared away."

A Few Facts Before the Axe

Conditional Grants 'Should Die'

Conditional grants to municipalities by the province should have died with the old government, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said Wednesday.

He was commenting on the fact that the Capital Regional District board had taken no action on a recent ad hoc study of ambulance services in the region, and that ambulance services are part of the stipulated use for provincial per capita grants.

"The region should now determine what the new government will do with respect to cost-sharing arrangements," Curtis said.

"My feeling is that the conditional grant policy should die with the passage of the old government."

Curtis said the needs of individual communities vary so greatly, "it is not possible for a senior government, no matter how sympathetic or careful, to come up with priorities on a province-wide basis."

If municipalities are entitled to grants, within the limits of general guidelines, it should be up to the individual councils to respond to community wishes and identify how money should be spent, he said.

"We reach the final state of foolishness," he said, "when (it is stipulated) $1 each should be applied to additional police services, industrial development and ambulance services."

POISON LETTER-BOMBS New Cong Peace Offer: Communists in Cabinet

ROME (Reuter) — A deadly poison used by South American Indians to poison arrows was mixed with explosives contained in a letter-bomb received Wednesday by a Jewish organization in Rome, police said today.

The envelope bore Malaysian stamps and a Penang postmark and contained a Black September visiting card.

It was received by the Rome branch of a world-wide organization for helping persecuted Jews which noticed that the letter had not been marked by the Rome post office—normal procedure for mail arriving from abroad.

Police bomb disposal experts said that the explosive was impregnated with curare, a South American poison which causes quick death by paralyzing the motor nerves.

If the bomb had gone off, the poison could have entered the wounds of the victim and made death certain, police said.

PARIS — The Viet Cong said today it is ready to discuss "concrete" guarantees not to seize power in South Vietnam if the United States agrees to the creation of a new cabinet in Saigon with a minority Communist participation.

The offer was made by Mme. Nguyen Thi Binh, the Viet Cong foreign minister and chief negotiator, at today's 162nd Vietnam conference session.

The offer was backed by a warning by both Madame Binh and Hanoi delegate Xuan Thuy that peace will come only if South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu is removed from power and replaced by a new tripartite coalition cabinet.

The 46-year-old Viet Cong woman politician said the United States was distorting the picture when it claimed the Viet Cong sought to seize control of the new cabinet it wants to form with the Saigon administration minus Thieu and neutral elements.

She said the Viet Cong already had offered to reach an agreement with Washington that South Vietnam would be dominated by "neither a Communist regime nor a U.S. puppet regime."

"We are also prepared to work out, together with other parties, concrete measures to implement this agreement," she said.

Agence France-Presse reports from Hanoi that an atmosphere of "cautious expectation" exists there concerning the chances of a negotiated settlement to the conflict, although the next move is seen as the Americans'.

"The provisional revolutionary government and Hanoi have drawn up proposals which will allow the two parties not to lose face, and now it's the Americans' turn to make their play," according to government sources.

The feeling of being virtually on the edge of a ceasefire, barring any accidents due to the stubbornness or the mis-handling of the situation by one of the parties involved, is shared by many observers here.

Failure to grasp the opportunity now presenting itself would, in all probability, mean that the chance would not be available again for another four years — the length of the presidential mandate in the United States.

In Washington today President Nixon ruled out any halt to the bombing of North Vietnam before the Nov. 7 election, saying former President Lyndon B. Johnson made a "very, very great mistake" when he did so just before the 1968 election.

Barrett Urges Cutbacks In Hydro Use

The NDP government wants British Columbians to use less electricity in order to conserve the province's energy resources.

Both Premier Barrett and Resources Minister Bob Williams said today the government is concerned with the amount of energy being consumed in B.C.

Asked by reporters if he has ordered B.C. Hydro to stop advertising promoting use of electricity, Barrett said he had not but that he "expressed the wish that we want to redirect the advertising."

"We don't want people to be wasteful of that wonderful energy resource," Barrett said. "We want people to cut down on the use of electricity."

The premier said his government "just doesn't believe that galloping electricity consumption is something that should be encouraged. We want every citizen in the province to become involved in conserving energy."

In response to a question Barrett said he would favor having the lights turned off on the B.C. Hydro building in downtown Vancouver "if that means conserving energy in peak periods."

He added that he would also favor a curtailment of light use at the Legislative Buildings, except during the tourist season.

Barrett also took a swing at electrical appliance manufacturers who he said are producing appliances that consume far too much electricity.

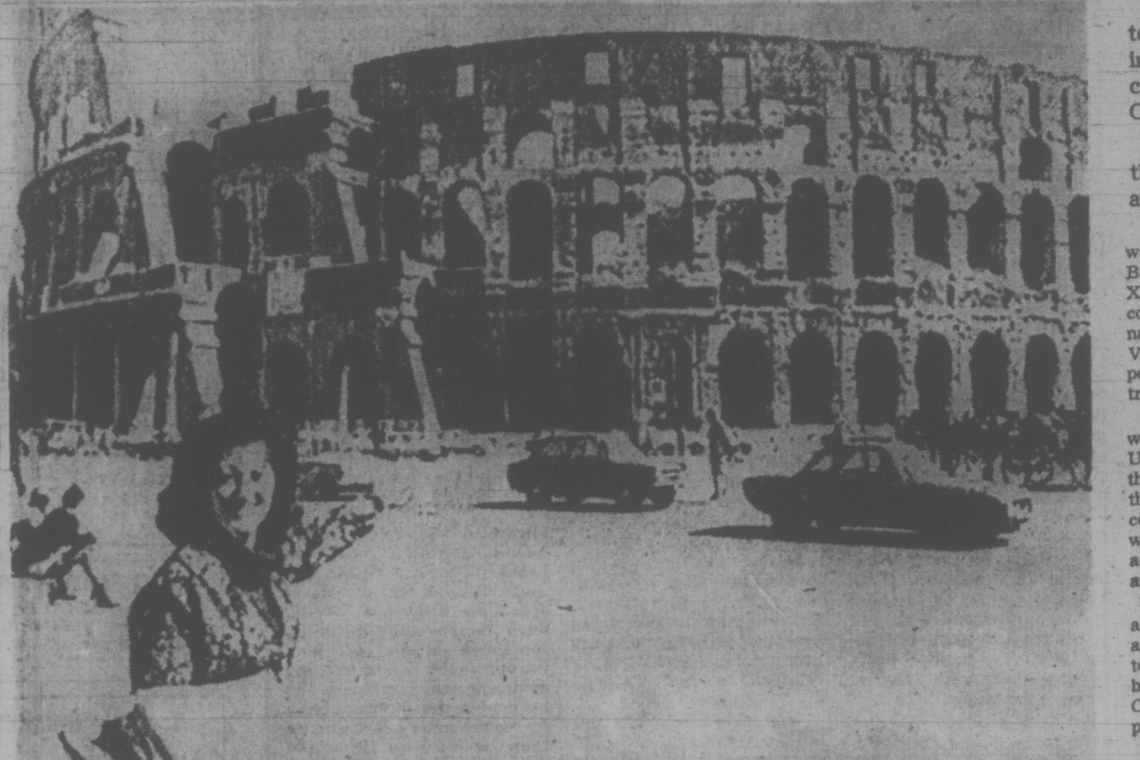

"Let us, small population as we are here in B.C., tell these manufacturers back east and elsewhere that we are going to lead the way in wanting more sensible standards in electricity consumption."

"There is a general concern by the government regarding the incredible demand pattern that exists in B.C. and which is a problem all over North America," Williams said.

"We are convinced that a study on a major scale in terms of working toward curbing demands for energy is something which we should get under way as soon as possible."

Williams said he will be releasing a policy statement on the issue of energy and the role of B.C. Hydro "within a matter of days."

Asked if there will be recommendations regarding Hydro directorships, Williams said "it will be a comprehensive statement."

Broker Fausta Vitali and 1,892-year-old 'real estate'

They're Vying for the Colosseum

PESCARA, Italy (UPI) — Thomas Merrick has found competition.

Italian hotel owner Antonio Zimei wants to buy the 1,892-year-old Colosseum, too. And he says his terms are better.

"If they take his offer seriously, why shouldn't they consider mine?" Zimei asked after announcing his bid to the press. "After all, I'm offering three times as much."

Zimei, 42, entered the Colosseum race after Merrick, a Los Angeles industrialist, announced he was willing to buy the crumbling Roman arena for $1 million, restore it and reopen it to the public for a fee. Miss Fausta Vitali, a real estate agent from Laguna Beach, Calif., arrived in Rome Wednesday to contact city officials in Merrick's behalf.

Zimei said he could not raise as much cash as Merrick. All he could pay right away, he said, was $100,000, but he was ready to throw his hotel in nearby Monteflavio into the deal. And that, he said, is worth $2.58 million and could be used as a school or for poor children's vacations.

"I will charge admission too, but only to foreigners," he said. "Italians can get in free."

VALLIERES SENTENCE SUSPENDED

MONTREAL (CP) — Pierre Vallieres, 34-year-old Quebec nationalist writer, Wednesday received a one-year suspended sentence on three charges of counselling political kidnappings.

Mr. Justice Claude Bisson of Court of Queen's Bench set six conditions Vallieres must abide by for a year.

The conditions are: He must keep the peace, maintain good conduct, appear before the court upon demand, report once a month to police, notify police of any change of address or job and refrain from making public attacks of any kind against the court.

PM 'Ducks Issue'

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield, in an unusually strong personal attack, accused Prime Minister Trudeau Wednesday of evading responsibility for the policies of his government.

In a frequently-applauded address to an overflow crowd in Edmonton's 2,750-seat Jubilee Auditorium, Stanfield roasted both Trudeau and Manpower Minister Bryce Mackasey for the "scandalous" condition of the unemployment insurance fund.

"The prime minister remains ever anxious to avoid discussing any matter of consequence, ever willing to shift the responsibility to his colleagues, ever reluctant to accept the burden of collective responsibility for the consequences of his own policies or lack of them."

"When a victorious hockey team returns to Canada, our prime minister is there to bask in the reflected glory of a Canadian achievement. Whenever he is asked to defend his policy or to explain his programs, he is out to lunch."

His words heavy with sarcasm, the leader of the opposition also twitted Trudeau over the prime minister's earlier promise of a leisure-activities program.

The prime minister has said that the program, when announced, will be a comprehensive statement.

METEORS SHOWER DISTRESS SIGNALS

LONDON (Reuter) — Meteors caused confusion in the North Sea during the night when ships' captains mistook them for distress flares.

Coast guards along the east coast of England reported a flood of emergency calls from shipping. Some vessels were even reported to have started searching for ships in trouble.

A coast guard spokesman said today: "For a time there was considerable confusion among shipping. One coast guard station got calls from four ships. But the stations conferred and decided it must have been a meteor shower."

Cargo To Be Seized

PARIS (Reuter) — The giant American Braden Kennecott Copper Corp., whose Chilean assets have been nationalized, has won a French court order permitting temporary seizure of a cargo of Chilean copper, informed sources announced Wednesday.

The freighter is due at Le Havre on Oct. 14, although it was an open question whether it would put in there now.

The American company partly owned the El Teniente copper mine from which the disputed shipment was extracted. El Teniente and the rest of Chile's "big five" mines were nationalized by President Salvador Allende's government 15 months ago.

BENNETT NAMES RICHTER

Opposition leader Bennett has named veteran Social Credit member Frank Richter as house leader for this month's special session of the legislature.

Bennett made the appointment Wednesday by telegram from Padua, Italy, where he is vacationing.

However, Speaker-designate Gordon Dowling said today Richter's apparent appointment cannot be made formal until the opening day of the session.

Richter himself said he expects no problems about his appointment and added that the other eight remaining Social Credit members have been advised.

5 Spies Executed, Says IRA

BELFAST (CP) — The Provisional wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army said Wednesday night it smashed a British army intelligence undercover ring in Belfast and "executed" five agents, including the daughter of an army brigadier.

The British army called the IRA claim "ridiculous rubbish." But it followed the machine-gun slaying Monday of British undercover agent Tom Stewart, posing as a laundry van driver in Belfast. The Provisionals admitted they were responsible.

The agent and a girl soldier posing as his assistant were one of several undercover intelligence teams operating in Belfast.

The teams form the 50-strong MRF Immediate Reaction Force, which is reputed to have scored several notable successes against the Provisionals in the last few months.

The army was reported to have launched a major security investigation into how the IRA learned the non-existent "Four Square Laundry" operation was an elaborate cover for an intelligence setup. There were fears the IRA had penetrated the undercover organization.

Sources said those fears were heightened Wednesday when the IRA said it had killed Stewart and four other agents, including the group's second-in-command, whom they identified as an army major known by the code-name "Bosman Jim."

U.S. Faces Mineral Supply Crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — A scientific group says the United States faces a disastrous mineral-supply crisis "within decades" unless it begins shifting its industrial base to plentiful domestic materials.

The report Wednesday to the national commission on materials policy was another warning that growth — both in population and material production — must come to a halt soon.

The group drawn from the National Research Council concluded "there can be no effective national or international materials policy" without considering population, per-capita demand and environmental impacts.

It said the "demand" side of the supply-demand equation has been largely ignored although "the numbers of humans occupying the earth must be limited to numbers it can comfortably sustain, and their individual consumptions of materials must be kept within supportable limits."

The report said the U.S. already is heavily dependent on foreign raw materials which will be increasingly depleted or withheld as underdeveloped nations industrialize and compete for their use.

Unless the U.S. begins soon to shift its economic base to materials plentiful at home, the report warned, "one can foresee, within decades . . . the erosion of mining, smelting, refining and mineral-based manufacturing industries, growing economic colonialism, international frictions, a steadily deteriorating balance of trade, and a tarnished global image of the nation."

It said government policy should be to convert the economy gradually into a stable, no-growth condition that can sustain itself indefinitely.

Thus, in milder terms, the U.S. group aligned itself with the general thrust of the Club of Rome report and British scientists' Blueprint for Survival, both published last January.

The Club of Rome, a group of international scientists and economists, predicted the collapse of modern industrial society, perhaps within a century, unless population growth and material consumption are stabilized within the next few decades.

The U.S. national commission on materials policy was appointed in 1971 with the mission of recommending a national materials policy to the president and Congress by June 30, 1973.

The commission gave an interim report in April identifying at least 36 issues in the area of materials-supply problems, but noted the list might be incomplete.

It contracted with the National Research Council for another study of issues.

That study, now published, said, "There was but small support in the group for the view that market forces alone will solve the foreseeable problems."

It said appropriate governmental incentives and controls should be applied to increase production to meet the needs of unavoidable population growth, but at the same time convert the economy in the long run to a no-growth stability.

Attempts to increase U.S. production of minerals, it said, would mean producing "ever-larger quantities of metals obtained from ever-larger investments of energy."

"Conservational measures are needed, not only to stretch our resources but to restore, protect, and perpetuate a livable human habitat."

"We believe that planned adjustment of technology to available domestic resources is essential," it said.

DRUG RAID in Rio de Janeiro netted $60 million worth of pure heroin which agents, acting on a tip, found in five bags aboard a New York-bound freighter. The seizure, largest ever in Brazilian history, weighed 132 pounds.

Blind Judge Elected in U.S.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — The new judge of the Duval County court is blind.

"I put my blindness on the line at the inception of the campaign," Louis Corbin said Wednesday, the day after winning election in a non-partisan contest.

Corbin lost his sight at age six in a shotgun accident. He said he doesn't feel it will handicap him in judging people or hearing evidence when he takes office in January.

His opponent in the race, Iven Lamb, had said a county judge must act as a coroner and "view the body."

Blindness, therefore, is "certainly not a qualification," Lamb contended.

Corbin replied that the practice is obsolete, with the county medical examiner's office or a private physician determining cause of death in most homicide cases.

AUSTIN, Tex. — An El Paso firm must pay $2,680 plus attorneys' fees for labels it ordered by mistake from the Monarch Marking Co.

The owner of Reed's Photo Mart, Inc. said he intended to order 4,000 labels but mistakenly ordered four million.

TORONTO — Team Canada hockey star Paul Henderson has turned down an invitation to campaign this weekend with Prime Minister Trudeau in the Oakville area.

Nega Henderson said her husband's decision had nothing to do with the opening home game of Toronto Maple Leafs against Chicago Black Hawks Saturday night.

"It's just that we've had enough excitement to last us for a long while," she said.

NEW YORK — Reports published recently say that reputed underworld leader Carlo Gambino has been suffering from heart trouble. Gambino, 73, alleged leader of all major crime families in the New York area, was listed in "satisfactory" condition Wednesday at Columbus Hospital. The hospital, however, did not say why he was there, nor how long he had been in the hospital.

Tax Appeal Lost

OTTAWA — The Supreme Court of Canada Wednesday dismissed an appeal by the Richardson family grain interests of Winnipeg against imposition of nearly $1.25 million in taxes on some of their 1963-67 incomes.

Mr. Justice D. C. Abbott, presiding over a panel of five judges, dismissed the case from the bench after hearing lawyers argue that arrangements made between Richardson Terminals Ltd., Marine Pipeline and Dredging Ltd., two Richardson firms, were proper and business-like.

The $1,249,878 in taxes had already been paid. Richardson Terminals was appealing against the levy, and took the case to the Supreme Court after the Exchequer Court ruled against it last year.

Richardson Terminals appealed against corporate income tax levies on $3.66 million in profits from a grain terminal at the Lakehead, earned in 1963 to 1967 when the firm was acting as agent for Marine Pipeline, a Richardson firm that previously had piled up losses totalling more than $1.88 million.

POISON LETTER-BOMBS New Cong Peace Offer: Communists in Cabinet

ROME (Reuter) — A deadly poison used by South American Indians to poison arrows was mixed with explosives contained in a letter-bomb received Wednesday by a Jewish organization in Rome, police said today.

The envelope bore Malaysian stamps and a Penang postmark and contained a Black September visiting card.

It was received by the Rome branch of a world-wide organization for helping persecuted Jews which noticed that the letter had not been marked by the Rome post office — normal procedure for mail arriving from abroad.

Police bomb disposal experts said that the explosive was impregnated with curare, a South American poison which causes quick death by paralyzing the motor nerves.

If the bomb had gone off, the poison could have entered the wounds of the victim and made death certain, police said.

Barrett Urges Cutbacks In Hydro Use

The NDP government wants British Columbians to use less electricity in order to conserve the province's energy resources.

Both Premier Barrett and Resources Minister Bob Williams said today the government is concerned with the amount of energy being consumed in B.C.

Asked by reporters if he has ordered B.C. Hydro to stop advertising promoting use of electricity, Barrett said he had not but that he "expressed the wish that we want to redirect the advertising."

"We don't want people to be wasteful of that wonderful energy resource," Barrett said. "We want people to cut down on the use of electricity."

The premier said his government "just doesn't believe that galloping electricity consumption is something that should be encouraged. We want every citizen in the province to become involved in conserving energy."

In response to a question Barrett said he would favor having the lights turned off on the B.C. Hydro building in downtown Vancouver "if that means conserving energy in peak periods."

He added that he would also favor a curtailment of light use at the Legislative Buildings, except during the tourist season.

Barrett also took a swing at electrical appliance manufacturers who he said are producing appliances that consume far too much electricity.

"Let us, small population as we are here in B.C., tell the manufacturers back east and elsewhere that we are going to lead the way in wanting more sensible standards in electricity consumption."

"There is a general concern by the government regarding the incredible demand pattern that exists in B.C. and which is a problem all over North America," Williams said.

"We are convinced that a study on a major scale in terms of working toward curtailing demands for energy is something which we should get under way as soon as possible."

Williams said he will be releasing a policy statement on the issue of energy and the role of B.C. Hydro "within a matter of days."

Asked if there will be recommendations regarding Hydro directorships, Williams said "it will be a comprehensive statement."

VALLIERES SENTENCE SUSPENDED

MONTREAL (CP) — Pierre Vallieres, 34-year-old Quebec nationalist writer, Wednesday received a one-year suspended sentence on three charges of counselling political kidnappings.

Mr. Justice Claude Bisson of Court of Queen's Bench set six conditions Vallieres must abide by for a year.

The conditions are: He must keep the peace, maintain good conduct, appear before the court upon demand, report once a month to police, notify police of any change of address or job and refrain from making public attacks of any kind against the court.

PM 'Ducks Issue'

Times News Services

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield, in an unusually strong personal attack, accused Prime Minister Trudeau Wednesday of evading responsibility for the policies of his government.

In a frequently-applauded address to an overflow crowd in Edmonton's 2,750-seat Jubilee Auditorium, Stanfield roasted both Trudeau and Manpower Minister Bryce Mackasey for the "scandalous" condition of the unemployment insurance fund.

"The prime minister remains ever anxious to avoid discussing any matter of consequence, ever willing to shift the responsibility to his colleagues, ever reluctant to accept the burden of collective responsibility for the consequences of his own policies or lack of them."

"When a victorious hockey team returns to Canada, our prime minister is there to bask in the reflected glory of a Canadian achievement. Whenever he is asked to defend his policy or to explain his programs, he is out to lunch."

His words heavy with sarcasm, the leader of the opposition also twitted Trudeau over the prime minister's earlier promise of a leisure-activities program.

The prime minister has said that the program, when an-

They're Vying for the Colosseum

PESCARA, Italy (UPI) — Thomas Merrick has found competition.

Italian hotel owner Antonio Zimei wants to buy the 1,892-year-old Colosseum, too. And he says his terms are better.

"If they take his offer seriously, why shouldn't they consider mine?" Zimei asked after announcing his bid to the press. "After all, I'm offering three times as much."

Zimei, 42, entered the Colosseum race after Merrick, a Los Angeles industrialist, announced he was willing to buy the crumbling Roman arena for $1 million, restore it and reopen it to the public for a fee. Miss Fausta Vitali, a real estate agent from Laguna Beach, Calif., arrived in Rome Wednesday to contact city officials in Merrick's behalf.

Zimei said he could not raise as much cash as Merrick. All he could pay right away, he said, was $100,000, but he was ready to throw his hotel in nearby Montelungaro into the deal. And that, he said, is worth $2.58 million and could be used as a school or for poor children's vacations.

"I will charge admission too, but only to foreigners," he said. "Italians can get in free."

METEORS SHOWER DISTRESS SIGNALS

LONDON (Reuter) — Meteors caused confusion in the North Sea during the night when ships' captains mistook them for distress flares.

Coast guards along the east coast of England reported a flood of emergency calls from shipping. Some vessels were even reported to have started searching for ships in trouble.

A coast guard spokesman said today: "For a time there was considerable confusion among shipping. One coast guard station got calls from four ships. But the stations conferred and decided it must have been a meteor shower."

Cargo To Be Seized

PARIS (Reuter) — The giant American Braden Kennecott Copper Co., whose Chilean assets have been nationalized, has won a French court order permitting temporary seizure of a cargo of Chilean copper, informed sources announced Wednesday.

Under the order issued by the Braden Kennecott Corp., the Liberian freighter Birte Oldendorff, carrying 1,250 tons of copper valued at 6.5 million francs ($1.2 million), would have its cargo impounded as soon as it arrives in France.

The copper is destined for the French metal importing agency, which handles 75 per cent of French copper imports, an agency spokesman said. Payment for the copper to the Chilean Copper Corp. — Codeco — is blocked during the court proceedings. The freighter is due at Le Havre on Oct. 14, although it was an open question whether it would put in there now. The American company partly owned the El Teniente copper mine from which the disputed shipment was extracted. El Teniente and the rest of Chile's "big five" mines were nationalized by President Salvador Allende's government 15 months ago.

PARIS — The Viet Cong said today it is ready to discuss "concrete" guarantees not to seize power in South Vietnam if the United States agrees to the creation of a new cabinet in Saigon with a minority Communist participation.

The offer was made by Mme. Bguyen Thi Binh, the Viet Cong foreign minister and chief negotiator, at today's 162nd Vietnam conference session.

The offer was backed by a warning by both Madame Binh and Hanoi delegate Xuan Thuy that peace will come only if South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu is removed from power and replaced by a new tripartite coalition cabinet.

The 46-year-old Viet Cong woman politician said the United States was distorting the picture when it claimed the Viet Cong sought to seize control of the new cabinet it wants to form with the Saigon administration minus Thieu and neutral elements.

She said the Viet Cong already had offered to reach an agreement with Washington that South Vietnam would be dominated by "neither a Communist regime nor a U.S. puppet regime."

"We are also prepared to work out, together with other parties, concrete measures to implement this agreement," she said.

Agence France-Presse reports from Hanoi that an atmosphere of "cautious expectation" exists there concerning the chances of a negotiated settlement to the conflict, although the next move is seen as the Americans'.

"The provisional revolutionary government and Hanoi have drawn up proposals which will allow the two parties not to lose face, and now it's the Americans' turn to make their play," according to government sources.

The feeling of being virtually on the edge of a ceasefire, barring any accidents due to the stubbornness or the mis-handling of the situation by one of the parties involved, is shared by many observers here.

Failure to grasp the opportunity now presenting itself would, in all probability, mean that the chance would not be available again for another four years — the length of the presidential mandate in the United States.

In Washington today President Nixon ruled out any halt to the bombing of North Vietnam before the Nov. 7 election, saying former President Lyndon B. Johnson made a "very, very great mistake" when he did so just before the 1968 election.

Opposition leader Bennett has named veteran Social Credit member Frank Richter as house leader for this month's special session of the legislature.

Bennett made the appointment Wednesday by telegram from Padua, Italy, where he is vacationing.

Richter himself said he expects no problems about his appointment and added that the other eight remaining Social Credit members have been advised.

5 Spies Executed, Says IRA

BELFAST (CP) — The Provisional wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army said Wednesday night it smashed a British army intelligence undercover ring in Belfast and "executed" five agents, including the daughter of an army brigadier.

The British army called the IRA claim "ridiculous rubbish." But it followed the machine-gun slaying Monday of British undercover agent Tom Stewart, posing as a laundry van driver in Belfast. The Provisionals admitted they were responsible.

The agent and a girl soldier posing as his assistant were one of several undercover intelligence teams operating in Belfast.

The teams form the 50-strong MRF Immediate Reaction Force, which is reputed to have scored several notable successes against the Provisionals in the last few months.
